PREFACE

A BIBLIOGRAPHY, unless confined to one particular author, to one particular press, or circumscribed by one strictly limited period—be it measured by time or by the activities of some literary movement—is bound to appear arbitrary and even capricious in its exclusion and inclusions of names and titles.

It has not been my aim, and it would be manifestly impossible within the compass of one volume to attempt to cover nearly two centuries, that is to say to catalogue the whole field of fiction from 1728, the year of the earliest novel I list, Thievery-a-la-Mode, to 1916, the date of Mary, my last entry. Selection is inevitable, and selection can never be altogether satisfactory to everyone.

Students then may ask, and ask with a very fair show of reason, why such an author is not to be found when such an other author is given in detail. There are many answers to inquiries and criticism of this kind, but perhaps the most practical (albeit not the best) rejoinder is to point out that, as well as other economies, economies of space were prescribed, hence something must needs go by the board.

Obviously those authors, for the most part the greater names, of whom there already exist standard bibliographies, may be pretermitted. None the less, since exceptions occur to every rule, William Beckford—to cite but one instance—will be found in the Index of Authors, yet not of course without appropriate reference to the fuller individual Bibliography and the recent authoritative studies of this amazing writer.

For Sir Walter Scott, Lord Lytton, George Payne Rainsford James, to mention but three other examples (and there are many more), the student will surely expect to go to particular and detailed monographs and memoirs of these masters of romance. There is a distinction, and one which I am confident will be easily appreciated and allowed, although I can quite well conceive that at first flush the obvious query might be posed: Why is Scott not included? Why not Lytton? Why not "Solitary Horseman" James?

Again, in spite of his essential importance and long-continued influence it were impertinent to calendar all the works of Horace Walpole. On the other hand the Plays, Poems, and Journals of Matthew Gregory Lewis could not be omitted, whilst under Charles Robert Maturin even his Sermons must be recorded.

I am very well aware that full-dress Bibliographies of Lewis, of Maturin, and (above all) of Mrs. Radcliffe are badly needed. Meanwhile I believe this present Bibliography with all its shortcomings will be found to give something that has not been attempted before, and thus it will in its measure fill a very sensible gap.

In this Bibliography, at least, will be found not a few names of authors as well as titles of novels which have hitherto received no notice whatsoever, and which are missing even from the catalogues of our national libraries. Amongst other details I have been able to identify several writers who have hitherto lurked under anonymity; I have assigned a considerable parcel of romances to their rightful authors, correcting erroneous ascriptions and dates, and from time to time untangling in the course of my research a deal of ambiguity and confusion. All this helps to clear the ground.

The beginnings of this Bibliography I can trace to forty and more years since when it was my habit to make lists with notes of the various books which struck me in the course of my reading. I gradually systematized (amongst other material) my terrier of the romantic field of fiction, and so soon as I projected a study of the Gothic Novel my collections became more and more ordered and arranged, so that in a little time I had by me a handy book of quick reference.

Originally, that is to say some fifteen years ago, when publication was suggested it was intended—hence the name—to concentrate upon a Bibliography of the Gothic Novel, but even so in order to make the book of real service many romances which foreshadowed and paved the way to the Gothic Novel could not be ignored, whilst it proved even more important to register the later romances which were written on the model and showed the influence of the Gothic Novel, although the parent stock was fallen from its high estate, demoded and out of vogue.

This led me to chart a region altogether unexplored, wherein it became (if possible) even harder to find the way. Here I do not claim to have done more than point the direction to other scholars, who as time goes on will be led to investigate in ampler detail, far beyond the scope of a Bibliography, that enormous school of sensational fiction which had its period of florescence from roughly 1830 to 1880, or perhaps one might even venture on a later date. Admittedly this was popular fare. As Mr. Michael Sadleir has well put it: "The Gothic Novel crashed, and became the vulgar 'blood.' The spirit of melodrama and of terror (which is only in rousing guise the spirit of escape) persisted unsubdued and persists to this day." It would appear indeed that at the present time of writing no form of fiction is more widely read or more eagerly pursued. But there is one great differentiating factor. The old sensation novel even at its slummiest and worst is infinitely superior, is far better written, far better contrived than the most recklessly puffed and panegyricized "thriller" to-day.

This disposes of the objection that the Edward Lloyd school of fiction has fallen into oblivion because it is unworthy of attention. As works of imagination these sensation novels are by no means negligible. To gain a complete understanding of the great romantic revival we must study it in all its expressions and in every mood. Romance may be uplifted in ecstatic beauty to the golden stars, but it may also be found to walk the crowded streets and hide in darkest alley-ways.

It is hardly to be surprised at that when the work of so striking figures as G. W. M. Reynolds and J. F. Smith has never received adequate treatment—it would be true to say they have never been seriously discussed at all—such authors as the prolific Thomas Peckett Prest, Malcolm J. Rymer, Mrs. Elizabeth Caroline Grey, James Lindridge, Edward Ellis, Thomas Frost, remain almost if not entirely unknown. Yet those who for the first time approach these minors—if indeed Prest and Rymer be minors in their own realm—will be astonished to find what a quality their chapters possess, how they can grip the reader's attention and hold him fast through endless adventures and turns of fate.

A warning word is perhaps due to the student and may not be inapposite here. The scarcity of the Gothic Novel and its successors constitutes a very real difficulty, and is a practical stumbling-block in the way of research. It is astonishing of how many novels in the following Bibliography only a couple of copies, or it may be only three copies, are at present known, and often these are not available in our national libraries, but are treasured in the hands of private collectors. In several instances, so far as it is possible to locate, one solitary exemplar survives.

The most famous publishing house which issued Gothic romances was beyond doubt the Minerva, although it must always be remembered (and it will, in fact, be amply evident from the following bibliography) that William Lane together with his partner and successor, Anthony King Newman, had no monopoly in Gothic fiction. Thus in 1808 T. F. Hughes, Wigmore-Street, Cavendish-Square, advertises amongst other novels—Family Annals; a Novel, in 5 vols., 25s., from the chaste pen of Mrs. Hunter of Norwich, Author of Letitia, Grubthorpe Family, Lady Palmerston's Letters, &c.; The Demon of Sicily; a Romance, 4 vols., 20s., by Edward Montague, Esq.; The Fugitive Countess; a Novel, 4 vols., 18s., by Miss Wilkinson; Adelgitha; a Play, in 5 Acts, 3s. (3d. edition) by M. G. Lewis, Esq., as performed at Drury-Lane Theatre with great applause; Feudal Tyrants; a Romance, 4 vols., 28s., by the same author (3d. edition); The Bravo of Venice; (5th edition), a Romance, 1 vol., 6s., by the same; The Monk of Udolpho; a Legendary Tale, 4 vols., 22s., by Mr. Horseley Curties; Alphonsine; a Novel, in 4 vols., 22s., from the pen of Madame Genlis; The Spanish Outlaw; a Tale, 4 vols., 22s.; Friar Hildargo; a Romance, 5 vols., 25s.; Count Eugenio; or, Fatal Errors; a Tale, 2 vols., 12s.; Moss Cliffe Abbey; a Novel, 4 vols., 18s. (2nd edition) by the Author of "A Summer at Brighton"; The Kinsmen of Naples; a Novel, 4 vols., 18s. (2nd edition) by the same; A Summer at Brighton; (5th edition in 4 vols.), 20s. To this Edition is now first added the fourth Volume, containing the Memoirs and Intrigues of the Modern Lais, a well-known woman of rank and fashion. The fourth volume is sold separate. Legends of a Nunnery; a romantic Legend, in 4 vols., 20s.; Confessions of Constantia; a Tale, 3 vols., 13s. 6d.; The Three Germans; a Romance, 3 vols., 12s.

The printers in ordinary for J. F. Hughes were J. Dean, 57 Wardour Street, Soho; and D. N. Shury, Berwick Street, Soho.

The first superintendent of the Minerva printing office, John Plummer, was followed by John Darling, who was succeeded by his son, the name Darling actually persisting as late as 1859.

The Minerva Press, Lane, or Lane and Newman, did not publish for Mrs. Radcliffe or Monk Lewis or Charlotte Dacre or Maturin. (It is true that late editions of Mrs. Radcliffe appear among Newman's advertisements.) On the other hand they published—yet not exclusively—for Mrs. Bennett, Mrs. Parsons, Mrs. Roche, Mrs. Meeke, Francis Lathom. In their particular field under the ægis of Minerva, Lane and Newman achieved an eminence which has left behind a name and a tradition even until to-day.

P R E F A C E

William Lane commenced bookseller about 1770, and publisher some four years later. It was not until 1790 that he adopted the title Minerva, and in the following year "at the Minerva, Leadenhall Street" begins to appear regularly on his title-pages. Anthony King Newman, an apprentice of Lane, was taken into partnership in 1801, and in 1802 the title-pages carry "Printed at the Minerva-Press, for Lane and Newman, Leadenhall-Street." In 1803 we have "Lane, Newman, and Co." In 1809 William Lane somewhat reluctantly—it is said—retired from business, and thus the title-pages now read "Printed at the Minerva-Press, for A. K. Newman and Co. (Successors to Lane, Newman, & Co.). William Lane died on Saturday, 29th January, 1814, at his residence, No. 3 Gloucester Place, Brighton. Timperley, Encyclopaedia of Literary and Typographical Anecdote, gives his age as seventy-six.

After 1820 Newman dropped "Minerva Press" from his title-pages, and during the thirties he was specializing in "Juvenile and Prize Books" of which he issued glowing catalogues. His ware included such specimens as Angelina, or Conversations of A Little Girl with Her Doll with numerous cuts, at half-a-crown; Miss Selwyn's Fairy Tales, half bound in roan, or cloth, lettered, with 40 plates at two shillings, which seems a cheap handsel; and Miss Caroline Horwood's Original Poetry for Children, also costing but a florin. At this time too he was issuing large numbers of the stories of that "amiable and ingenious writer of tales for young and old alike," the admired and eminently meritorious Mrs. Barbara Hofland (1770-1844). Newman's catalogue of 1838 includes no less than thirty of this lady's works. There are her tales, Decision, Energy, Fortitude, Patience, Self-Denial, the evergreen Young Crusoe, or, The Shipwrecked Boy, as well as her more distinctly educational lucubrations, Africa Described, Including the Recent Discoveries; A Panorama of Europe; The Illustrated Alphabet, and many more. In their "Elegant Embossed Bindings, With Gilt Edges, And Lettered, Illustrated with Plates," the Hofland Tales are really charming little volumes.

The output of romances was sparser in these years, although it had by no means ceased. In 1841, for example, Newman published The Witch of Aysgarth in three volumes by Miss C. D. Haynes.

Newman was also much occupied with remainder publishing. Buying the sheets from other houses he printed a new title-page carrying his own name, and thus in his catalogues we find titles of books which actually had already appeared bearing the imprint of another firm. There is no indication, moreover, that the Newman issue is not a genuine first.

In Notices to Correspondents, The London Journal, edited by G. W. M. Reynolds; published Vickers, 28 Holywell Street, Strand; Vol. I, No. 20, July 12th, 1845, p. 320, col. 3, R.S.L. is informed: "Lord Byron did not write 'The Vampire,' although it was for many years attributed to him. It can be procured of Newman, Leadenhall Street."

A. K. Newman retired in 1848. The stock was sold to Robert S. Parry, also a remainder publisher, who continued business at the Minerva for six years, until 1854.

Of Anthony King Newman, Le Fanu wrote in March, 1862: "That patron of undeveloped fictional genius held on till within the last score years, when he retired to take some rest at Gravesend, at the ripe age of four score. From all that we can learn, he was an estimable citizen, and possessed judgement in his peculiar walk. Remnants of his stock, done up in cloth to have a modern air, were sent to the great auction-rooms in Dublin, Edinburgh, and other large towns, previous to handing on his good-will to his successor. At this day there is no representative of the old firm." Forgotten Novels: Dublin University Magazine, March, 1862; Vol. LIX, No. CCLI (p. 349).

The following Bibliography had been some little while in the printer's hands when there was issued The Minerva Press 1790-1820 By Dorothy Blakey, Ph.D. London Printed For The Bibliographical Society At The University Press, Oxford 1939 (for 1935). Miss Blakey by concentrating upon a particular press during a particular period has naturally been able to handle her material in far greater detail than would be possible in the case of a one volume Bibliography the scope of which extends over nearly two hundred years, and hence is necessarily set out on quite another plan. The industry of Miss Blakey's research is evident, and The Minerva Press 1790-1820 remains a valuable contribution to the Gothic library.

Whilst I have not attempted to include in this Bibliography the "roman noir" or the "Schauerroman" a few French and German writers are admitted, either because their works were frequently translated into English by our native novelists, or else because they directly influenced the development of the Gothic Novel in England. This I feel to be allowable, if only for the one fact that such references, which for the most part cost a good deal of time and trouble to check up and trace, will certainly prove grateful to scholars.

For the same reason I have drawn attention to various dramatizations of Gothic Novels.

Of the ten plays of Henry Siddons there has been occasion to list only one, The Sicilian Romance. For the rest the Biographia Dramatica and Genest must be consulted. The Sicilian Romance, however, is intrinsically important, as also is all the dramatic work of Maturin.

None the less I would have it clearly understood that I did not conceive any particular treatment of these parerga to lie within my province.

This observation equally applies to the Gothic pataches, those wee oberins the chapbooks which swarmed from the parasitic presses of Houndsditch and the Borough and Finsbury Square, from Tegg, Dean and Munday, Roe, Harrild, J. Ker, and Ann Lemoine. I have (as I hope) sufficiently recognized the existence of the sixpenny "blue books"—so called from their 36 pages being roughly stitched into a cover of flimsy blue paper—without attempting exhaustively to apprise their numbers.

It should perhaps be pointed out that there will be found some entries under authors' names in the Index of Authors which have not been duplicated in detail in the body of the Bibliography. The reason for this is that whilst in not a few cases it seemed useful and even necessary to give a complete list of an author's work it was obviously not required to devote to his every treatise or monograph, which had no connexion with imaginative writing, such additional space and consideration as must have swelled the Bibliography to a second volume without any real profit or advantage. At the same time the student is advised to consult in the course of his inquiries both the Index of Authors and the Bibliography proper.

It is with very real regret that so long a list of Addenda has been found necessary. I can only ask those who use this Bibliography generously to bear in mind that the proofs were corrected at a most unhappy time under the most untoward and difficult conditions. Several libraries, for example, in which I had planned important and extensive research circumstances rendered impossible of access. It even became a question whether publication should be indefinitely and quite indeterminately postponed, or whether, as was in fine and I believe well decided, the Bibliography should be issued in spite of so serious lets and unavoidable mischance.

It is a pleasure to thank Mr. Michael Sadleir, a great votary of the Gothic Novel, for the kindly interest he has shown in the present Bibliography, and for the generous courtesy with which he has replied to my frequent questions fabulis de Gothicis. I am especially obliged to him for reading through and checking the Miss Braddon section in the "Index of Authors." His intimate knowledge and authority afforded me many valuable suggestions.

Mr. Robert Black of the University of Virginia has not only most generously spared neither time nor trouble in discussing with me and disentangling many perplexed points concerning Gothic romances and their authors, but has further entrusted me with rare novels from his magnificent collection, sending them from America to England. I am moreover indebted to him for permitting me the full use of the Catalogue of his Library to the very great and manifest advantage of my Title Index.

To that eminent scholar Mr. Frederick Coykendall of New York I owe particular thanks for much real and truly appreciated encouragement during the progress of my work. This took a very practical form, for he has been good enough to allow me to print several important notes upon that important book The Monk, as also upon Tales of Terror. Many another page of my Bibliography has profited by his wide knowledge and sympathy.

For their encouragement and for help so freely given in various ways I am gratefully obliged to Mr. C. R. Dawes, who read through and checked the de Sade section in the "Index of Authors," and with whom I have to my advantage discussed details not a few; to Mr. F. C. Francis; Sir Ambrose Heal; Mons. Maurice Heine; the late Mr. C. A. Ransom; and Sir John Squire. The article on Robert Huish appeared in Notes and Queries, 11 February, 1939; Vol. 176, No. 6; whence it is reprinted by kind permission of the Editor.

During the whole course of a long and laborious piece of work I have been greatly aided by the practical assistance and many valuable suggestions of Mr. Hector Stuart-Forbes, who will (I trust) accept this very inadequate recognition and acknowledgement.

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

Numbers 14, the title-page of the American edition, Philadelphia, 1817, of Mrs. Shedden's The Hero; and 19, the title-page of A Tale of Mystery, Or Celina, a Novel altered from the French of François Guillaume Ducray-Duminil, by Mrs. Meeke, Minerva Press, 1803, are reproduced by kind permission of Mr. Robert K. Black from the excessively rare, if not unique, copies in his library.

The remainder of the Illustrations, nineteen in number, are from the Author's collection.

XVIII. St. Ostberg; or, The Carmelite Monk. A Romance. In Four Volumes. London: Printed by J. Dean, 7 Wardour Street, Soho. Published and Sold by M. Taylor and Co., 25 Dean Street, Soho, and by All Booksellers. 1811. Title-page of the First Edition.
By Miss Caroline Horwood, afterwards Mrs. Baker. Strictly speaking the title is a misnomer, and should be The Carmelite Friar , although it is true that "Monk" is often very loosely used. Ambrosio who gives his name to the famous romance of M. G. Lewis, The Monk , is not actually a monk but a Capuchin friar. In the French versions, Le Moine , he is a Dominican friar	496
XIX. A Tale of Mystery; or, Celina. A Novel. In Four Volumes. Altered from the French of Ducray-Duminil by Mrs. Meeke, Author of Which is the Man, the Sicilian, etc., etc. "O passions des hommes!"
London: Printed at the Minerva-Press for Lane and Newman, Leadenhall-Street. 1803.
Title-page of the First Edition.
The original, Cœlina, ou l'Enfant du Mystère , published in 1798, 6 vols., Paris, was the most popular of all the romances of François Guillaume Ducray-Duminil. It was reprinted in at least twenty editions, and in 1800 was dramatized with great success by Guilbert de Pixérécourt. This play, Cœlina , was adapted for the English stage by Holcroft as A Tale of Mystery: a melodrama , Covent Garden, Saturday, November 13th, 1802. Holcroft's version for many years maintained its place in the London and provincial repertories. This title-page is reproduced by courtesy of Mr. Robert K. Black	512
XX. Vesuvia; or, Anglesea Manor. A Novel. In Three Volumes. By the Author of Valambrosa, and Forresti.
Quoth Sidrophel, it is no part Of prudence to cry down an art, And what it may perform, deny Because you understand not why. Do not the hist'ries of all ages Relate miraculous presages Of strange turns in the world's affairs Foreseen by astrologers?

XXI. Women As They Are . A Novel in Four Volumes, By Mrs. Parsons. Author of Mysterious Warnings , etc. London: Printed for William Lane, at the Minerva-Press, Leadenhall-Street. MDCCXCVI. Frontispiece to the First Edition. The Illustration represents a highly romantic episode in the adventures of Mary Boyle and her father, who have been compelled by adverse circumstances to retire to the remote and lovelier parts of Scotland. When Mary Boyle in company with her friend Miss Gordon are exploring a romantically ruined castle near Elgin they meet a mysterious recluse who has taken refuge there. This proves to be a Captain Morgan, who in India, having seduced the wife of Miss Gordon's brother, killed the unhappy husband in a duel. Overwhelmed with remorse Morgan fled, and immured himself in the Mount, Elgin. When he hears Miss Gordon's name he falls, senseless with horror, to the ground amid the broken walls, so injuring himself that a few days later he expires. Miss Gordon swoons in the arms of Mary Boyle, whose father together with Mr. Ross, minister of the parish, are seen flying to their assistance. Women As They Are is an epistolary novel, and the chief events in the story are related by the heroine, Mary Boyle, in letters to her former gouvernante, the amiable Mrs. Rowe. Women As They Are is a work of exceptional merit and interest. The varied characterization of the different writers of the letters is admirably portrayed and maintained throughout their correspondence	560

A GOTHIC BIBLIOGRAPHY

INDEX OF AUTHORS

ACTON, MRS. EUGENIA DE

- Essays on the Art of Being Happy, Addressed to a Young Mother* 1803
A Tale Without A Title: Give It What You Please 1804
The Nuns Of The Desert; Or, The Woodland Witches 1805
The Discarded Daughter 1810

AGG, JOHN

- Edwy And Elgiva; An Historical Romance Of The Tenth Century* 1811

AINSWORTH, WILLIAM HARRISON (1805-1882).

Many of Ainsworth's novels are in the Gothic tradition. Rookwood, 1834, he explicitly avows to be "a story in the bygone style of Mrs. Radcliffe." There is a very ample Ainsworth Bibliography in Vol. II of William Harrison Ainsworth and His Friends by S. M. Ellis, 1911. See also H. Locke's Bibliographical Catalogue of the Published Novels of Wm. Harrison Ainsworth, 1925.

ALEXANDER, GABRIEL

A very prolific miscellaneous writer and journalist. Below are listed his five best known novels, and what are probably his two most famous short stories.

- Robert Bruce; The Hero King of Scotland* 1840
Wallace; or The Hero of Scotland 1848
The Minister's Story. Short story 1850
The Bottle; or, The Drunkard's Career 1850
The Avenger. Short story 1850
Lilias; or, The Milliner's Apprentice 1851
Adelaide; or, The Trials of a Governess 1854

ALGERNON

- The Royal Wanderer; or, The Exile of England* 1815

- ALLENDALE, ALFRED
The Man of Sorrows 1808
- AMPHLETT, J.
Ned Bentley 1809
- ANDREWS, CHARLES
The Spectre 1789
- ANDREWS, DR.
Augusta; or, The Female Travellers 1788
- ANN OF KENT
The Castle Of Villeroy; Or, The Bandit Chief 1827
- ANN OF SWANSEA. MRS. JULIA ANN CURTIS, née KEMBLE, and formerly MRS. ANN HATTON (1764-1838) Joseph Knight and other authorities state that this lady was the fifth child of Roger Kemble, and the sister of John Philip Kemble and Sarah Siddons. Betrayed by a bigamous first marriage with Mr. Hatton, she was left a widow by her second husband, Mr. Curtis, with whom she had been compelled to fly from America on account of the yellow fever. She obtained considerable notoriety and greatly scandalized her family by an attempt to poison herself in Westminster Abbey. Eventually she settled at Swansea, subsisting upon a small pension made up by Mrs. Siddons and other relatives, since the hotel she opened, the "house of assembly," the "school of dancing and deportment," had all proved insufficient for her support. She is said to have been a mistress of Edmund Kean and to have written a drama for him whilst he was a member of Andrew Cherry's company, whose circuit included Swansea, Carmarthen and Haverfordwest in South Wales; Waterford and Clonmel in Ireland. Kean acted with Cherry 1809-11. Mrs. Curtis was a celebrated local figure, a favourite and frequent contributor of verses to the Swansea newspaper, Cambrian. Percy Fitzgerald, The Kembles (1871), Vol. II. pp. 98-107, says that Mrs. Ann Curtis proclaimed herself up and down the town as the youngest sister of Mrs. Siddons and intensely annoyed the famous tragedienne by her general behaviour and proceedings. At length Mrs. Siddons paid the novelist twenty pounds a year on condition that she permanently resided not less than one hundred and fifty miles from London. No doubt this or some similar condition was attached to the annuity the Kembles allowed their poor relation, but it seems highly improbable that if Mrs. Curtis had not been their sister they would have contributed (however niggardly) to her maintenance. With regard to her literary output it must be acknowledged that the romances of the prolific Mrs. Curtis are by no means lacking in quality, and in its kind her talent is far from mediocre.

ARNOLD, JUN., SAMUEL JAMES (1774-1852)

The Creole; or, The Haunted Island

1796

Samuel James Arnold is the author of the popular melodrama The Woodman's Hut, produced at Drury Lane on 12th April, 1814, with music by C. E. Horn. Arnold was a very prolific dramatist, who translated from Pixérécourt, Charles the Bold; or, The Siege of Nantz, Drury Lane, June 15th, 1815, from Charles le Téméraire, ou le siège de Nancy; from Caignier, The Maid and the Magpye; or, Which is the Thief, Lyceum, August 28th, 1815, from La pie voleuse, ou la servante de Palaiseau; and adapted Scott, The Wizard; or, The Brown Man of the Moor, Lyceum (then English Opera House) July 26th, 1817.

ASHE, CAPTAIN THOMAS

The Charms of Dandyism

ATKYNs, SAMUEL

Adeline; or, The Grave of the Forsaken. A drama, adapted from the novel of the same name published by E. Lloyd, 1841, and produced at the Royal Albert Saloon, Shepherdess-walk, Britannia Fields, Hoxton, on September 29th, 1849. Atkins was house dramatist to the Albert Saloon, which opened in 1844 under H. Brading, and here all his one-and-twenty dramas were given. In August, 1844, a license was refused to his The Thieves' House; or, The Murder Cellar of Fleet Ditch. At the same time, August, 1844, George Dibdin Pitt's The Murder House; or, The Cheats of Chick Lane (Britannia), and Thomas Prochis Taylor's George Barrington; or, The Life of a Pick-pocket (Garrick) were prohibited.

BACULARD D'ARNAUD, FRANCOIS THOMAS DE (1716-1805)

Les Époux malheureux, ou l'histoire de Monsieur et de Madame de la Bédoyère

1745

Les Amans malheureux, ou le Comte de Comminge, drame en trois actes . . . suivi des Mémoires du comte de Comminge

1764

Euphémie; ou Le Triomphe De La Religion, drame

en trois actes . . . suivi des Mémoires D'Euphémie.
Seconde Édition	1768
Sélicourt , nouvelle (pp. 79)	1769
Anne Belle , histoire anglaise (pp. 64)	1769
Épreuves du sentiment , romans, 6 tom.	1772-81
Nouvelles historiques	1774-84
Délassements de l'homme sensible	1783-93

The "dramas monacles" and novels of Baculard D'Arnaud had a great influence on the development of Gothic romance. His tone is often more than a little morbid, and he reflects Young's Night Thoughts, Hervey's Meditations among the Tombs, and the sensibility of Richardson. A large number of the stories (many dealing with England) from his Collections were translated into English. Thus Sophia Lee translated Varbeck (Nouvelles historiques, Tome premier, seconde nouvelle) as Warbeck, a pathetic Tale. There are also English versions of The History of Sidney and Volsan, Dublin, 1772; Fanny, or The Happy Repentance, 1777; The History of Count Gleichen, 1786; Lorimon; or Man in Every Stage of Life, 1803; and other pieces by D'Arnaud.

The above is a fairly representative list of D'Arnaud's work as influencing the Gothic romance, but it is by no means complete.

BAGE, ROBERT (1728-1801)

Mount Henneth	1781
Barham Downs	1784
The Fair Syrian	1787
James Wallace	1788
Man As He Is	1792
Herm sprong; or, Man as he is not	1796

BALFOUR, FAIRFAX

Serialized in the London Journal , commencing 16th May, 1863.
Nelly; or, The Companions of the Chain	1864
Serialized in the London Journal , commencing 5th March, 1864.
Three Women; or, The Fatal Passion	1865-6
Serialized in the London Journal , commencing 9th December, 1865.

- Fairfax Balfour was a well-known sensation novelist of the day. The above are typical of his work, which in its kind often reaches a high level.
- BALL (FITZBALL). EDWARD (1792-1873)
 The famous writer of melodramas.
The Black Robber; a romance 1819
- BARHAM, REV. RICHARD HARRIS (1788-1845)

The Setting Sun; or, Devil amongst the Placemen. To which is added a new musical Drama; being a Parody on the Beggar's Opera 1809
 8vo. A burlesque by Cervantes Hogg.
Woman. A Poem 1810
- This poem contains the famous lines :
 Not she denied her God with recreant tongue,
 Not she with traitrous kisses round Him clung;
 She, while Apostles shrank, could danger brave,
 Last at His Cross and earliest at His grave.
- It must be remembered that the author assiduously revised and polished his Poem, therefore there are variants of these lines.
- The Metropolis; or, A cure for gaming. Interspersed with anecdotes of living characters in high life. By Cervantes Hogg, Esq.* 1811
 3 vols., Minerva-Press, A. K. Newman.

BLANCHARD, EDWARD LEMAN or LAMAN
(1820-1889)

The Mysteries of London; or, Lights and Shadows of London Life 1849-50

When G. W. M. Reynolds severed his connexion with George Vickers and transferred to a new publisher, John Dicks, Vickers commissioned Thomas Miller to write the Third Series, and E. L. Blanchard to write the Fourth Series of The Mysteries of London, of which the First and Second Series were the work of Reynolds. It must be allowed that neither Miller nor Blanchard can be considered as successful as Reynolds, and the Third and Fourth Series fell far below the original conception of the work. Blanchard was a very busy miscellaneous writer and a leading dramatic critic. His pantomimes were established favourites. For further details see under his name in the Dictionary of National Biography.

Pickwick in America, edited by Bos 1839
Mr. Humfries Clock 1840
 All published by Edward Lloyd in penny weekly numbers.
 The "Bos" parodies and imitations of Dickens were written in collaboration by Thomas Peckett Prest, William Bayle Bernard, and Morris Barnett. Lloyd

the publisher suggested the idea of travesties of the popular Dickens, and he urged that the pen-name of "Boaz" should be used. It was pointed out to him that this was too biblical, whilst the letter "z" being so nearly "Boz" might involve legal proceedings. After some discussion "Bos" was fixed upon, and in spite of protests from Charles Dickens and his publishers Lloyd issued "Bos" tales very successfully for five or more years.

The illustrations to Pickwick in America are said to be by George Cruickshank, and the book in the reprint of 1855 was assigned to G. W. M. Reynolds, which seems an erroneous attribution.

A similar Dickensian piracy is Dombey and Daughter, by R. Nicholson, 1848.

BRADDON, MARY ELIZABETH, MRS. JOHN MAXWELL

(October 4th, 1837—February 4th, 1915)

See Time Gathered Autobiography (1937). By W. B. Maxwell, Chapter XVII, "My Mother" for some account of Miss Braddon and how she commenced novelist.

- Three Times Dead; or, The Secret of the Heath* 1854

When Miss Braddon was staying at a farmhouse near Beverly, Yorkshire, Empson a Beverly printer who had noticed many of her verses and sketches in local papers commissioned her to write for him a story which "should combine the humour of Dickens with the plot construction of G. W. M. Reynolds." Three Times Dead had just been issued in penny numbers with fierce woodcuts of the E. Lloyd school of illustration when Empson failed. On the title page the main imprint is "London: W. M. Clark, 16 and 17 Warwick Lane." Empson, Beverly, is much smaller. Mr. Michael Sadleir writes to me: "I have a set of the proof sheets of Three Times Dead, which belonged to James Mills, who, according to his statement written on the fly-leaf, read the proofs for Empson. He says the novel was published in penny numbers 'in the year 1854 or thereabouts.'" Three Times Dead was considerably altered and appeared later as The Trail of the Serpent, see below under this title. About 1858-9 Miss Braddon came to London.

The Black Band; or, The Mysteries of Midnight 1860
The serial with which The Halfpenny Journal "started on its ambitious but brief career."

Produced at the Royal Strand Theatre

The Trail of the Serpent; or, The Secret of the Heath 1866

Mr. Michael Sadleir writes to me: "The first appearance of The Trail of the Serpent was, I believe, in one vol. blue cloth, 1866; Ward, Lock & Tyler. This edition contains a Publisher's device dated July, 1866, describing the book as a largely rewritten version of an earlier (unnamed) tale, now making its first appearance. I have a letter from Maxwell to Empson, dated 1865 stating that he owns an assignment of copyright in the book, but will consider Empson's claim (clearly a claim to ownership) on a basis of documents. I incline to think negotiations delayed publication till 1866 by which time Maxwell was (I conclude from the evidence) with Ward, Lock."

As The Trail of the Serpent the book was published in the popular yellow back edition, 1867, and included in the "autograph edition." In a letter to myself, July 28th, 1907, Miss Braddon said: "The autograph edition in cloth, of all my books, is better than the old-fashioned yellow back."

The American pirated edition, New York, Dick and Fitzgerald, retains the title Three Times Dead; or, The Secret of the Heath.

Reference books record an 1861 edition of The Trail of the Serpent, but this has not hitherto been seen, and it is strongly to be suspected that it is a ghost.

There is a translation from the French, Thrice Dead. A Novel. In three volumes. By Paul Féval. London: T. Cautley Newby, 1869.

Garibaldi, and other Poems 1861
Published by Bosworth and Harrison

- Aurora Floyd* 1863
 3 vols., Tinsley.
 A serial in Temple Bar. Published by Tinsley Bros. who had tied their new author for several successive books.
- Lady Audley's Secret* 1861
 Commenced as a serial in Robin Goodfellow, a paper edited by Charles Mackay and issued from an office of its own, 122 Fleet Street. The same address appears on the earliest Maxwell publication, Henry Dunbar. This ended after thirteen weeks (July 6—Sept. 28, 1861) and the unfinished serial began again in The Sixpenny Magazine, commencing in Vol. II, No. 3. March, 1862. Lady Audley's Secret was "second serialized" in The London Journal from March 21st to August 15th, 1863.
- Lady Audley's Secret* 1862
 3 vols., Tinsley Bros.
 Published October 1st, 1862, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th editions, all 3 vols., 1862. See "Notes on 'Lady Audley's Secret'" by Michael Sadleir, Times Literary Supplement, May 11th, 1940.

Miss Braddon during her long literary career did a vast amount of miscellaneous work. In her earlier days she contributed to the old Sporting Magazine under the noms de plume of "Gilbert Forrester" and "A Member of the Burton Hunt." For the Poet's Corner of provincial newspapers she composed not only songs and sentimental verses, but parodies and even political squibs. She conducted for many years various magazines, amongst others Belgravia A London Magazine, and herein were serialized a number of her novels. A novel, Mirk Abbey, which has been ascribed to Miss Braddon is the work of James Payn. It was published anonymously. Mirk Abbey. By the author of Lost Sir Massingberd, etc. 3 vols., 8vo. London, 1866. Reprinted from "Chambers Journal."

Not a few of Miss Braddon's novels were pirated in New York during the sixties and seventies, sometimes under the proper titles, sometimes with an altered name. Thus Dick and Fitzgerald published Miss Braddon's "Celebrated Novels," including The Lady's Mile; Lady Audley's Secret; The Outcasts, or The Brand of Society; Darrell Markham, or, The Captain of the Vulture; and Dudley Carleon, or, The Brother's Secret, "a tale of startling interest."

 This lady translated into French The Mysteries of Udolphé as Les Mystères d'Udolphé, 4 vols. in—12 and 6 vols. in—18, Paris, chez Maradan, 1797. In her Mémoires (édit. 1906, tom. I, pp. 299-305) she speaks of this translation, and says, "Le succès de mes Mystères d'Udolphé avait été rapide." Actually her version cannot be accounted in all respects a very faithful rendering of the original, but it had nevertheless great influence in its own day. Her Mémoires 1771-1815, publics par A. Roserot, 2 tom., Paris, 1896, is a work of much interest.

Le Petit Carrillonneur, 4 vols., 12mo. 1809
La Fontaine de Sainte Catherine, 4 vols., 12mo. 1813
- The above are the best known romances of Ducray-Duminil. Born at Paris in 1761, he died at Ville-d'Avray in 1819. He wrote much miscellaneous work, many songs and ballads. His Couplets sur le mariage de Napoléon le Grand, 1810, were greatly applauded. Many of his plays proved very successful, such as La Femme au deux Maris; and Victor, Cœlina, both of which are taken from his novels of the same name. The principal English translations of his work were:
- Victor; or, The Child of the Forest* (translated from Victor, 1796) 1802
Celina; or, A Tale of Mystery (translated by Mrs. Meeke from Cœlina, 1798) 1803
Julian; or, My Father's House (translated by Mrs. Meeke from Jules, 1804) 1807
The Novice of St. Ursula 1810
The Little Chimera (translated from Le Petit Carrillonneur, 1809) 1812
L'Hermitage St. Jacques, i.e. The Hermitage of St. James; or, God, Our King, and Our Country 1815
The Blind Beggar; or, The Fountain of Saint Catherine (translated from La Fontaine de Sainte Catherine, 1813) 1817

The following plays by René-Charles Guilbert de Pixérécourt (1773-1844) are founded on romances by Ducray-Duminil :

Alexis, ou la Maisonette dans le bois, comédie, 3 acts, 1794

Victor, ou l'enfant de la forêt, drame, 3 acts, 1798

Cœlina, ou l'Enfant du Mystère, melodrame, 3 acts, 1801

 Errym was an exceedingly prolific author. The last seven titles are before 1861. In a re-issue John Dicks claims George Barrington; or, Life in London A Hundred Years Ago for Errym, but this romance (1851) is actually the work of T. Frost.

GABRIELLI

Pseudonym of Mrs. Mary Meeke. See under MEEKE.

H.M.T. writing in Notes and Queries, February 16th, 1856, asks for "an account of Mrs. Meeke who, about the end of the last century, and the beginning of this, published a great many novels, some under the name of Gabrielle [should be Gabrielli] which had for a time some success." There is ample contemporary evidence for the identity of Mrs. Meeke and Gabrielli.

Anecdotes of the Altamont Family, 4 vols., 1800, is anon., but "by the author of The Sicilian," and on last leaf of Vol. I advertises "By the same author: The Mysterious Wife." The Mysterious Wife is by

Gabrielli. Which Is The Man? 4 vols., 1801, is by Mrs. Meeke, "author of Anecdotes of the Altamont Family, Ellesmere, etc." The last leaf of Vol. I advertises "Just published, By the same Author, Harcourt." Harcourt was published as by Gabrielli, i.e., By the Author of The Mysterious Wife, etc., Celina; or, A Tale of Mystery, 4 vols., 1803, is by Mrs. Meeke, "Author of The Sicilian."

Defauconpret, "le traducteur des romans historiques de Walter Scott," as Le Mystère, ou Il y a quarante ans, 4 vols., 1821, and Calthorpe, ou les Revers de fortune, 4 vols., 1821, respectively. In the Catalogue général des livres

THE FARMER OF INGLEWOOD FOREST

By Elizabeth Helme

1796. Illustration, p. 282, seventh edition

imprimés de la Bibliothèque Nationale, Tome LXXXIX, 1926, Col. 872-873, by a curious error these two romances are ascribed to Francis Lathom, probably owing to some initial confusion of Gaspey's The Mystery; or, Forty Years Ago (1820) with Lathom's Mystery (1800). The Catalogue général also has "LATHOM (Francis), pseud. de Sophie Francis." Again, Tome LIV (1913) Colonne 433, it enters "FRANCES (Sophie) Pseud. de LATHOM (Francis)" Miss Sophia L. Francis has been confused with Lathom. See further under her name in this Index of Authors.

 Jean Claude Gorjy, "the First Wit in France," was born at Fontainableau in 1753, and died at Pinceloup, near Rambouillet in 1795. His first book Nouveau voyage sentimental, 2 vols., had reached a sixth edition in 1795. In 1787 he produced three plays at La Salle de Beaujolais, Amour d'Arlequin et de Séraphine; Torts apparents; and La Famille américaine (sic.). In Blançay, 2 vols., 18mo., 1787, he is supposed to have sketched his own life. His best known novels are, Victorine, 2 vols., 12mo.; Saint-Alme, 2 vols., 18mo.; and Lidorie, written as an old chronicle, 2 vols., 12mo. His Tablettes sentimentales du bon Pamphile, 2 vols., was long popular. In Ann'quin Bredouille, ou le Petit Cousin de Tristram Shandy, 6 vols., published as "oeuvre posthume de Jacqueline Lycargue" he attacked the Revolution, and satirized Marat as Tamar. He was not however guillotined, although this is sometimes stated. In 1798 a collected edition of his works appeared in Germany.

- GREY, MRS. ELIZABETH CAROLINE, née DUNCAN
 (1798-1869)
 This lady has been referred to as Mrs. Colonel Grey, but this appears to be an error. Elizabeth Caroline Duncan was a niece of Miss Duncan, a favourite actress of the earlier years of the eighteenth century. In melodrama she was a charming heroine and created such rôles as Alexina, the Heroine of Montgatz, in Theodore Edward Hook's Tekeli; or, The Siege of Montgatz (adapted from Pixérécourt's Tékéli; ou le siège de Montgatz, Paris, December 29th, 1803) produced at Drury Lane with great success on Saturday, October 28th, 1806. Elizabeth Caroline Duncan and her sister kept a school for girls in a side street off the City Road, then a very genteel part of the town. She married Grey, a reporter of the Morning Chronicle, and for many years was general secretary to Edward Lloyd, the publisher, and general editress of his publications. In 1846 she won his One Hundred Guinea Prize with Ordeal by Touch. Mrs. Grey wrote a number of "penny dreadfuls" for Lloyd as well as other more sober and restrained novels. A number of ladies contributed to Lloyd's stock, including such famous names as Mrs. Gore and Mrs. Bray, but they were careful to remain anonymous. Mrs. Grey contributed to The London Journal and other periodicals. Her nephew, Mr. Duncan, was a well-known newspaper reporter, and his son, Walter Duncan, a free-lance reporter, died in 1904. Mrs. Grey died in 1869, being seventy-one years old. She appears to have been in comfortable circumstances after an industrious and active life.

Contes à nos enfants	1824

The Baronne de Méré was so prolific a writer that the above fifty-two titles do not exhaust the list of her works. When she published under her own name the sentiment is generally decorous, she does not offend piety, and her politics are sound. In romances which she gave the world under such pseudonyms as de Boissy, Geller, de Faverolles, and which were supposed to come from the pen of a man she is often very obscene, and what is far worse even profane. The pages of Les Capucins, Les Trois Moines, Le Diable ermite are unblushingly licentious. On the other hand, in her later life she wrote works beyond reproach such as Contes à nos enfants, and devotional biographies. Her Saint Vincent de Paul may be read with much profit.

Les Trois Moines was translated by J. H. Sarratt as The Three Monks!!! 2 vols., Crosby, 1803.

- Mrs. Helme, the wife of William Helme, a well-known Brentford schoolmaster, who wrote Evenings Rationally Employed, 1803, pub. Norbury (Brentford) and Hurst, was an ardent educationalist and very prolific with her pen, translating both from French and German, and publishing a considerable number of moral and educational works which had a great vogue in their day. Among her translations are Travels from the Cape of Good Hope into the interior parts of Africa, 2 vols., William Lane, 1790, from the French of Le Vaillant. From the German of Joachim Heinrich Campe she translated Columbus; or, The Discovery of America, 2 vols., 1799; Cortez; or, The Conquest of Mexico, 2 vols., 1799; Pizarro; or, The Conquest of Peru, 2 vols., 1799. Very popular were her version of Plutarch's Lives, abridged, 1795; Instructive Rambles in London and the adjacent Villages, 2 vols., 1798; Maternal Instruction; or Family Conversations on novel and entertaining Subjects, 1802; The History of England, related by a Father in familiar conversation to his Children, 1805; The History of Scotland, related by a Father in familiar conversation to his Children, 1806; Fruits of Reflection, or moral remembrances on various subjects, 2 vols., 1809; and her posthumous A Preparatory Exercise; or, The Road leading to the Land of Learning, 1816. Most of these, and other similar works, ran into three and more editions. Of her ten novels, three at least, Louisa, The Farmer of Inglewood Forest, and St. Clair were steadily reprinted until the end of the nineteenth century.

Memoirs of Bryan Perdue 1805
 There is in the British Museum, Egerton MS. 2429, a letter addressed by Holcroft, dated Clipstone Street, 30 Fitzroy Square, November 8th, 1808, to Cadell and Davies the publishers, offering them an original novel in 3 vols., of which two are ready and the third will be ready before Christmas. The latter is marked on the margin "Declined." It has been conjectured that this refers to Memoirs of Bryan Perdue, but this is impossible, as the work had been published by Longman, Hurst, three years before. It can only be supposed that the novel in question was never printed. It is possible (but hardly probable) that the manuscript still exists. The Memoirs of the late Thomas Holcroft, written by Himself, first edition, 3 vols., 1816, and several times reprinted is a work of great importance, but Holcroft was an avowed atheist. There is a very ample and detailed Bibliography of Thomas Holcroft by Elbridge Colby, Columbia University, Notes and Queries, 11th Series, Volume X, commencing July 4th, 1914, and continuing until March 27th, 1915, 11th Series, Volume XI. This was printed, New York, 1922, and is the standard authority.

For Holcroft's knowledge of German see letters in The Times Literary Supplement," January 23rd, 1937, from V. R. Stallbaumer, and reply from Oskar Teichman.

HUIISH, ROBERT (1777-1850)

The suggestion of Mr. Askew (Notes and Queries, clxxv 172, 446) that Robert Huish was a Catholic is extremely interesting, and it were very much to be wished that we could ascertain something definite on this point. Contra, I can only offer internal evidence and internal evidence is notoriously tricky and inconclusive. Yet it is difficult to see how a Catholic author could have written some of the passages which occur in Huish's two romances The Sorcerer, 1795, and The Brothers; or, The Castle of Niolo, 1820. The Sorcerer, for example, commences with a violent and wildly un-historical diatribe against the ages of "monkish sway" and when "brother Hilario," a most saintly old priest, makes his appearance we are at once told that he alone of the whole fraternity stripped "Religion of the fantastic ornaments in which Fanaticism and Priestcraft had enveloped her." This is practically the tone throughout the tale, although it may be argued that The Sorcerer is a translation from the German, and therefore Huish is not responsible for the expression of the original, which it was his business to render faithfully.

The period of The Brothers is also the centuries of “monkish sway”—this actual phrase occurs in both romances—and almost without exception “the whole cowed tribe” are presented in the most lurid light. Such blunders as “a Franciscan monk” and “a Carmelite monk” are perhaps not to be surprised at, but Huish shows himself very much at sea when speaking of Catholic emblems, whilst his ignorance of quite elementary details of belief and practice is such that a child’s catechism would have set him right. It is this ignorance which leads him to write of a doctrine he clearly does not in the least understand as “farcical, not to say impious.” His monks of Arienheim keep up the crusted old tradition, that is to say they “carouse over their glasses and laugh at the credulity” of the simple devotees who load their house with gifts. Very delightful are their appeals to their “holy patron, St. Benedictine”! Perhaps I should observe that one of the blackest villains—and there are not a few—in the romance, is “Sazzano the atheist,” who is described as “a consummate fiend.” Any mention of nuns in The Brothers is in the very vein of Matthew Gregory Lewis. One of Huish’s later romances, The Nun of Gnadenzell, 1846, is highly sensational, and was in fact published by the most famous and popular purveyor of “bloods” and “dreadfuls,” Edward Lloyd, 231, High Street, Shoreditch.

It seems almost certain that Robert Huish the author was in some way connected with—he may have been a nephew of—the Robert Huish of Nottingham whose daughter Mary married Sir Robert Bewicke of Closehouse. It is significant, as Mr. Askew has so rightly emphasized, that this lady died in a convent at Pontoise, c. 1779.

Robert Huish the author, son of Mark Huish of Nottingham, was born in that city anno 1777. Whilst yet in his teens he entered as a student at the University of Frankfort-on-the-Main, thus acquiring an exceptionally good knowledge of the German language and literature. At a rather later date he was for some time resident in Russia, presumably in a tutorial capacity. Most of his life was spent in London, and he died in Camberwell in April, 1850.

In spite of a few faults of taste and some foolishness in his writings, it cannot be denied that Robert Huish was possessed of considerable talent. The bitter sneer of the Quarterly Review which spoke of him as "an obscure and unscrupulous scribbler" is unmerited and untrue. In his rôle of novelist Huish could tell his tale well; his complicated plots are generally knit with care and neatly enough unravelled. Myself, I have been chiefly concerned with this author as a Gothic romancist, and as such he is an interesting link, his first fiction appearing in the year before Mrs. Radcliffe's The Italian, and his last being published when Dickens was engaged upon David Copperfield and Thackeray was midway with Pendennis.

Huish was a very prolific miscellaneous writer, and the following list of his works with a few accompanying details may prove useful.

- The Sorcerer: A Tale.* From the German of Veit Weber, 1795. A translation of Die Teufelsbeschwörung. Veit Weber is a pseudonym of the historian, dramatist and novelist Georg Philipp Ludwig Leonhard Wächter; Nov. 25, 1762—Jan. 8, 1835.

Rizzio; or, Scenes in Europe during the Sixteenth Century

By the late Mr. Ireland. Edited by G. P. R. James, Esq.

William Henry Ireland. "His name, if his father is to be credited, is Samuel William Henry Ireland," Monthly Mirror, Dec. 1796, p. 490. The contemporary MS. annotator of a copy, British Museum, of An Authentic Account of the Shakesperian MSS., 1796, writes: "I am informed that his baptism is registered that year (1777) in the parish of St. Clement Danes by the name of William Henry Irwyn, according to his mother's name, who was then a married woman, living with Mr. Ireland, separated from her husband."

William Henry Ireland is famous for his amazing forgery, the pseudo-Shakespearean Vortigern, which was produced at Drury Lane on 2nd April, 1796. Vortigern was published 8vo, 1799. Henry the Second, An Historical Drama which, had Ireland succeeded, was also to have been presented as by Shakespeare, was similarly issued, 8vo, 1799.

After the collapse of Vortigern Ireland acknowledged his forgeries in An Authentic Account of the Shakesperian Manuscripts, published by Debrett, 8vo, at a shilling. "A Triumphant avowal of the FORGERY of which so much has lately been said and written," Monthly Mirror, December, 1796, p. 481. This Authentic Account in 1805 was expanded into The Confessions of William and Henry Ireland, containing the Particulars of his Fabrication of the Shakespeare Manuscripts . . . In spite of the fact that the Authentic Account had been pirated it had become so scarce that within a few years the shilling pamphlet fetched a guinea at public auction. Hence there was a great demand for the Confessions. Ireland became a very busy miscellaneous writer. For further details of his romances, see Montague Summers The Gothic Quest, where a portrait is given.

Since many of Hannah Maria Jones' novels were published without a date the actual year of issue is in several cases extremely difficult to fix with any precision. In the address (from 62 Mount Street, Grosvenor Square), "To The Reader" before The Gipsey Chief, she says "More than twenty years have——'dragged their slow length along,' since the authoress of the Gipsey Chief launched her light and frail bark on the troubled sea of literature." She complains of the "cruel wrong" she has suffered from "pirates and robbers." Thus her bibliography is made especially intricate and obscured on account of the plagiarisms, the unauthorized reprints and spurious editions of her work which swarmed even during her lifetime. Her popularity was enormous, and continued so that until the end of the nineteenth century many of her romances were appearing in cheapest guise with crudest woodcuts, generally without date or printer's name. J. S. Pratt of Stokesley, Yorkshire, in his "Pocket Series" (c. 1840-50); Milner & Co., Paternoster Row; W. Nicholson and Sons of Halifax (later of Wakefield); S. D. Ewins & Co., Paternoster Row; were all prolific purveyors of Hannah Maria Jones' novels in a more respectable but strictly economical format. In February, 1854, John Lofts, 262 Strand, advertised an edition of The Gipsy Mother by Hannah Maria Jones. "The publisher having purchased the copyrights of the most celebrated works of the above talented and popular authoress (who is still living) begs respectfully to inform the public that they will be reprinted in a handsome form, and profusely illustrated with beautiful wood-carvings, at a price hitherto unattempted."

JUDSON, EDWARD ZANE CARROLL (1823-1886)

E. Z. C. Judson who wrote and is best known under the pseudonym Ned Buntline, was born Philadelphia, Pa. 1823, and died Stamford, Delaware, New York, 1886. As a boy he ran away from home to sea, and his life is full of almost melodramatic incident and escape. His first published piece was a story of adventure contributed to the Knickerbocker Magazine in 1838. In 1848 he was established as the proprietor of a newspaper Ned Buntline's Own. As Ned Buntline he wrote a large number of sensational stories which were immensely popular.

La Princesse de Clèves, 1678

The earliest English translation is 8vo. 1679. The Princess of Cleves. The most fam'd romance. Written in French by the greatest wits of France. Englished by a Person of Quality at the request of some friends. Term Catalogues, May (Easter), 1679.

It has been said that perhaps Mme. De La Fayette was helped in the writing of these novels by Jean Reynaud de Segrais.

LAMB, LADY CAROLINE (1785-1828)

A new Canto 1819

Glenarvon 1816

Reprinted, 1865, as The Fatal Passion.

Graham Hamilton 1822

Ada Reis 1823

Some of Lady Caroline Lamb's verses are in Isaac Nathan's Fugitive Pieces and Reminiscences of Lord Byron, 1829. Lady Caroline furnished a curious emblematic frontispiece in stipple to Frances Arabella Rowden's A Christian Wreath for the Pagan Deities, or an Introduction to Pagan Mythology, 8vo, 1820, an odd enough attempt at "contrasting the truths of Christianity with errors of Pagan superstition."

LA MARTELIÈRE, JEAN HENRI FERDINAND

The Three Gil Blas; or, Follies of Youth 1804

A novel from the French of La Martelière.

This prolific dramatist wrote a striking melodrama Le Testament, ou les Mystères d'Udolphé, 1798, founded on The Mysteries of Udolpho.

A letter from the author, Francis Lathom, who was then in America, to the publisher, A. K. Newman, accompanied the manuscript of Italian Mysteries and was printed following the title-page of Volume I. "In consequence of the communication made to me by our mutual friend J.B. on his return from England last summer, respecting the liberal terms which you were prepared to offer me for a Romance, I have transmitted to you the three volumes which accompany this. A very handsome offer had already been made me for the manuscript, by a publisher in this country; but, in consequence of your application, I found myself not less bound, than inclined to continue to move under the auspices of an old friend, to whose liberal and gentlemanly conduct I with pleasure embrace this opportunity of confessing myself to have owed many advantages."

THE BROTHERS, OR THE CASTLE OF NIOLO

A Romance by Robert Huish
1820. Illustration, Vol. I, 213

- One o'Clock! or the Knight and the Wood Dæmon*, a Grand Operatic Romance, an alteration of The Wood Dæmon 1811
- Poems* 1812
- Rich and Poor*, an Opera
(adapted from The East Indian) 1812
- Crazy Jane*, a Song, 12mo
(Printed in the Poems) 1825?
- The Isle of Devils*, a historical tale (verse), printed Kingston, Jamaica, at the Advertiser Office 1827
- The Isle of Devils* was written by Lewis in November, 1815, on shipboard during his first journey to Jamaica.
It is printed, pp. 261-289, in the *Journal of A West
India Proprietor*, as The Isle Of Devils. A Metrical Tale.
- Journal of a West India Proprietor* 1834
- The Life and Correspondence of M. G. Lewis* 1839
Edited by Mrs. Baron-Wilson.
- This work reprints a large number of occasional pieces by Lewis. At the end of Volume II are Miscellaneous Poems and Translations, as well as the commencement of an early burlesque novel by Lewis, The Effusions of Sensibility, left unfinished.
- In the "Remarks" introductory to Oxberry's edition of The Castle Spectre, 1819 The Twins, a Farce, and The Harper's Daughter, a tragedy, are listed. The Twins; or, Is it he, or his brother (from the French) was played once at Drury Lane for Bannister's benefit, 8th April, 1799. The Harper's Daughter was the title given to The Minister (from Schiller's Cabale and Liebe) when produced at Covent Garden on 4th May, 1803. There is an American edition, Philadelphia, 1813, as The Harper's Daughter: or Love and ambition. A tragedy. With alterations. A pencil note in a copy of T. Rea's Schiller's Dramas and Poems in England, 1906, University of Wisconsin Library, says that The Robbers was "Tr. M. G. Lewis in 1794, while attaché at the Hague."
- The Castle of Lindenberg; or The History of Raymond and Agnes. A Romance*. Fisher [1799]. The editor in his preface seeks to imply that this abridgement of The Monk is due to Lewis himself. For these piracies from The Monk, and chapbooks, such as Almagro and Claude; or, Monastic Murder, 1803, and Father Innocent, Abbot of the Capuchins, 1803, see under The Monk.

Tales of Superstition and Chivalry, London, 1802, has sometimes, but without warrant, been attributed to M. G. Lewis.

Koenigsmark the Robber; or, The Terror of Bohemia: in which is included, The Affecting History of Rosenberg and Adelaide, and their Orphan Daughter. By M. G. Lewis, Esq., M.P., Author of "The Monk," "Raymond and Agnes," "Bravo of Venice," etc. Dean and Munday. N.D. [c. 1808] is a spurious piece. Koenigsmark the Robber; or, The Terror of Bohemia, was adapted by J. H. Sarratt from the German of Rudolf Erich Raspe, 1801.

Les Orphelines de Werdemberg, roman que Lewis avait lui-même traduit de l'allemand. trad. en français par R. G. Durdent. 4 vols. 12mo. Paris, 1809. A spurious attribution. Probably Durdent is the author.

Les Mystères de la Tour Saint-Jean. Par le baron de La Mothe-Houdancourt, plus tard de La Mothe-Langon. 4 vols. 12mo., Paris, 1818. A spurious attribution to Lewis.

The New Monk. A Romance by R. S. Esq. 1798. A parody on The Monk.

A parody upon the poem of Alonzo the Brave and the Fair Imogene [by M. G. Lewis]. Being a juvenile attempt at poetry. [By Charles Few]. With an engraving, folio broadsheet. Laurie and Whittle. London. 1799.

An Epistle in Rhyme to M. G. Lewis, Esq., Author of the Monk. With other Verses, including Stanzas addressed to Mrs. Jordan. By — Soame, Esq., late of Trinity College, Cambridge. 8vo. pp. 24. 6d. Lunn.

Moonshine, More Wonders, an heroic epistle to M. G. Lewis. London, 1801. By Mauritius.

Tales of the Devil. From the Original Gibberish of Professor Lumpwitz, S.U.S. and C.A.C. in the University of Snoringberg. 1801.

A Parody on Tales of Terror and Tales of Wonder.

The R — L Spectres! or the P — e in a Panic. A - Tale of Wonder.* By Monk Lewis, Esquire, London. 8vo. 1813. A squib in verse satirically published under Lewis' name, attacking the Prince Regent.

Leixlip Castle 1825
The Sybil's Prophecy. A Dramatic Fragment 1826
The Siege of Salerno, a completed tragedy, is stated to have been found among Maturin's papers after his death. Extracts from this play were published in the Irish Quarterly Review, 1852. It is presumably identical with a tragedy, Osmyn, which Maturin submitted to Edmund Kean. Maturin's correspondence and several unpublished manuscripts are said to have been destroyed by his son, the Rev. William Basil Maturin.

 Mrs. Meeke translated The Unpublished Correspondence of Madame du Deffand, 2 vols., 1810; and in 1811 she completed Mrs. Collyer's version of Klop-stock's Messiah, Books 1—16 by Mrs. Collyer, remainder by Mrs. Meeke, London, J. Walker, 2 vols. 1811.
 (Mrs. Collyer's Messiah, commenced by Mary Collyer, first ed. 1763). Allibone, Vol. II., p. 1260, says that "Mrs. Meeke published about fifty volumes of novels of her own and translated several of other persons."
 The above list, exclusive of her translations from Lafontaine and Ducray-Duminil, and romances issued as by Gabrielli, comprises considerably more than sixty volumes. For Mrs. Meeke's pseudonym GABRIELLI see under that name.

Luxima the Prophetess: a tale of India 1859
 A revision of The Missionary.
 There is a separate study of Lady Morgan, The Wild Irish Girl, 1936, by Lionel Stevenson. Written in a readable lively style the work is entertaining, but unfortunately falls into many errors. The account of the Roman authorities is mere caricatura, whilst to allude to Cardinal Wiseman as "the obscure professor" is ridiculous.

- MORTON, MRS. SARAH WENTWORTH (1759-1846)
The Power of Sympathy: or, The Triumph of Nature 1789
 The first American novel. An epistolary novel. Mrs. Morton wrote as "A Lady of Boston," and was also known as "Philenia," a Della Cruscan poetess. F. S. Drake assigns The Power of Sympathy to Mrs. Morton, but it is now claimed that the author was William Hill Brown. See Emily Pendleton and Milton Ellis, Philenia, the Life and Works of Sarah Wentworth Morton, University of Maine Studies, 1931, and Milton Ellis, "The Authorship of the First American Novel," in American Literature, January, 1933.

MOSER, JOSEPH (1748-1819)

The Biographia Dramatica, 1812, Vol. I, pp. 527-8, gives a list of twenty-three plays by Moser. Cephisa is dated 1804; the last Adelfrid, 12mo, 1811. Most are slight enough, such as additional scenes to Murphy's The Upholsterer, 1807; to Vanbrugh's Æsop, 1808; Scenes in Imitation of the Rehearsal, 1809; An Additional Scene to As You Like It, 1809; An Additional Scene to the Alchymist, 1809; and a shoddy linsey-woolsey melodrama, Nourmahal Empress of Hindostan, 1808, founded upon Aureng-Zebe, for which see Dryden The Dramatic Works, edited by Montague Summers, Vol. I (1931), Introduction, pp. xcvi—xcviii.

NAUBERT, CHRISTIANE BENEDICTE EUGENIE (1756-1819), daughter of Dr. Hebenstreit of Leipzig, married Johann Ernst Naubert. Born at Leipzig, 13th September, 1756, she died 12th January, 1819.

Her works, including translations from the English, number more than 80 volumes. She made use of several pseudonyms, and issued her famous Hermann von Unna, 2 vols, 1788, as Professor Kramer, which led to confusion with Karl Gottlob Cramer (1758-1817), author of Der deutsche Alcibiades, 3 vols., 1790 (reprinted 1814, etc.), to whom Hermann von Unna is often mistakenly ascribed. See, for example, Bayard Quincy Morgan, Bibliography of German Literature in English Translation, Univ. of Wisconsin Studies in Language and Literature, No. 16; Madison, 1922; p. 80, under Cramer, Number 551. For English translations from Eugenie Naubert see under KRAMER. It may be remarked that K. G. Cramer himself employed more than one pseudonym: Heinse; Müllers; Milbillers. Among Christiane Naubert's best-known romances are:

Walther von Montbarry. 2 vols.	1786
Geschichte der Gräfin Thekla von Thurn, 2 vols.	1788
Hermann von Unna, 2 vols.	1788

L'Observateur	1820
La Sainte Ligue, ou la Mouche, roman historique	1829
Contes à mon petit fils, 2 vols.	1831

The above are the best-known romances of Pigault-Lebrun, but these titles do not exhaust the list. When collected 1822-24, eleven years before his death and whilst he was still busy, his Oeuvres complètes ran to twenty volumes. Born at Calais on 8th April, 1753, he died at La Celle-Saint-Cloud, Seine-et-Oise, on 24th July, 1835. A dramatic trifle Il faut croire à sa femme having been received with some favour encouraged him to write a more regular comedy, Charles et Caroline, which was given at the Comedè Française in 1778. This is said to be founded on incidents in his own life. He followed it up with other plays, such as Les Rivaux d'eux mêmes in the same year; La Mère rivale de sa fille; Le Pessimiste. Pigault-Lebrun produced much miscellaneous work, but his novels established his reputation. Of these the eccentric Les Barons de Felsheim and Monsieur Botte are generally considered the best.

Those of his novels which were published in English proved very popular, and the following—all save one title from the Minerva Press—had a wide circulation:

The Shrove-tide Child; or, The Son of a Monk 1797

A translation of L'Enfant du Carnaval.

The Sorrows of Werter, A new translation "by Dr. Pratt," 16mo, 1809; 8vo [1813]; 16mo, 1823; is sometimes ascribed to S. J. Pratt, who was a prolific miscellaneous writer, a poet and a dramatist.

PREST, THOMAS PECKETT (c. 1810-1879)

Prest was a relative of the Right Rev. Edward Prest, Archdeacon of Durham during the eighteen sixties, and he prepared for the printers not a few of this divine's theological treatises and sermons. Prest commenced his career by adapting farces and melodramas from the French. At one time he supplied many dramatic pieces to the Britannia Theatre (or Saloon), High Street, Hoxton, which from 1841 to 1849 was managed by Mr. Lane. Such scripts were never printed, and never intended for publication.

Prest, moreover, was a talented musician and writer of songs, and under various pen-names he composed both words and music for more than one popular success of George Leybourne, "the Great Vance," and other famous music-hall artists of the day.

He further busied himself with a quantity of miscellanea, and contributed to The Hornet and to several other contemporary humorous or scandalous journals. His favourite house-of-call was for many years The White Swan in Salisbury Court, Fleet Street, E.C., hard by the offices of his publisher, Edward Lloyd.

Prest died of lung trouble in an infirmary near London in the late seventies, probably 1878-9.

For his Dickensian plagiaries see under "Bos."

There is no notice of Prest in the Dictionary of National Biography where he was certainly entitled to a place.

The Miser of Shoreditch. An original romantic drama 1854

Produced at the Royal Standard Theatre, Shoreditch, 2nd November, 1854. Adapted by Prest from his romance of the same title.

The Miser of Shoreditch. A drama by Angelina. Published New York 1857

To Prest has been attributed the plagiarism of Mrs. Crowe's famous novel Adventures of Susan Hopley; or, Circumstantial Evidence, 1841, as Susan Hopley, 1842.

Since many of Prest's romances were published without a date and in penny numbers, and many also are anonymous, the date of issue in several cases can only be arrived at by some accidental detail or circumstance. So great also is the confusion concerning Prest's authorship that the British Museum Catalogue assigns Kathleen; or, The Secret Marriage, 1842, and Blanche Heriot; or, The Chertsey Curfew, 1851, to Clara Reeve, who died in 1807.

Lloyd, 1841. See Title Index under Adeline; or, The Grave of the Forsaken.)

Susan Hopley; or, The Vicissitudes of a Servant Girl (George Dibdin Pitt's domestic drama Susan Hopley; or, The Vicissitudes of a Servant Girl, Royal Victoria Theatre, May 31st, 1841).

Each tale is complete in one number, containing sixteen closely printed pages and a splendid illustration. Complete for One Penny. London: George Purkess, Compton Street, Soho, 1853. These Penny Romances were the direct descendants of the Gothic bluebooks. For the most part they were merely the story of popular melodramas (some of which I have noted) resolved into fiction for Purkess' Library. Very often the melodrama itself was the dramatization of a famous novel. Thus Eugene Aram is Lord Lytton's romance; Herne the Hunter is Ainsworth's Windsor Castle; and Susan Hopley Mrs. Crowe's novel of the same name.

Mazeppa; or, The Wild Horse of Tartary (Drama: H. M. Milner. Astley's, April 4th, 1831).

The Blood Red Knight (Spectacle by J. H. Amhurst. Astley's, April 23rd, 1810).

The Dumb Man of Manchester (Drama by Barnabas F. Rayner. The Factory Assassin; or, The Dumb Boy of Manchester, Astley's, September 25th, 1837. Afterwards only sub-title used and called The Dumb Man of Manchester. Printed Dicks Plays No. 368; Lacy, vol. XXVI).

The Miller and his Men (Pocock, Covent Garden, November 21st, 1813).

The Vicar of Wakefield (Joseph Stirling Coyne. Three act play, Strand, March 4th, 1850. Previously a piece of this name had been given as a "Pastoral Opera" at the Haymarket on September 27th, 1823. There are many—and some famous—later adaptations of Goldsmith's novel for the stage).

Obi; or, Three-fingered Jack (Fawcett's play of this name, Haymarket, July 2nd, 1800. Music by Arnold).

Black Beard the Pirate (Melodrama. John C. Cross. Royal Circus, 1798).

The Maid and the Magpie (Pocock, Covent Garden, September 15th, 1815).

The Red Rover (Melodrama by Fitzball, from Cooper's novel. Adelphi. February 9th, 1829).

Black-eyed Susan (Jerrold. Surrey, June 8th, 1829).

The Corsican Brothers (Adaptation from French drama, produced Princess's, February 24th, 1852).

Minnigrey; or The Gipsies of Dingley Forest, a melodrama in 3 acts. (J. F. Smith's famous novel 1851-2, almost simultaneously dramatized).

The Forty Thieves; or Ali Baba the Woodman, a melodramatic romance in 2 acts. (Colman. Music, Kelly. Drury Lane, April 8th, 1806).

Uncle Tom's Cabin. Harriet Beecher Stowe's Uncle Tom's Cabin; or, Life among the Lowly, ran as a serial from 5th June, 1851, to 1st April, 1852, in the National Era, a Washington Abolitionist paper. It was published, 2 vols., on the 20th March, 1852. In England, it has been said, Uncle Tom's Cabin was "a triumph of pirated editions," and the book was at once dramatized both in America and in England. The play, one version of which was promptly printed by Purkess, immediately established itself as a popular favourite, and was to be seen at practically every Minor Theatre in London.

Azazel the Prodigal. Auber's grand opéra L'Enfant Prodigue, five acts, libretto by Scribe, was first given at the Académie, Paris, on 6th December, 1850. It was produced in English, at Drury Lane, on 19th February, 1851, as Azazel the Prodigal, and on account of the great success forthwith pirated and adapted as a melodrama or a "melodramatic spectacle" for the Minor Theatres.

Ada the Betrayed. A melodrama founded upon Malcolm J. Errym's popular romance (also attributed to T. P. Prest) Ada the Betrayed; or, The Murder at The Old Smithy. 1842.

Blue Beard. Colman's Blue Beard; or, Female Curiosity. Music by Kelly, Produced "with extraordinary success" at Drury Lane, January, 1798, and long popular.

The Will and the Way; or, The Mysteries of the Abbey. A drama in two acts. J. F. Smith's famous novel, London Journal, 1852-3, almost simultaneously dramatized.

Many chapbooks were abridgements and unauthorized redactions of Mrs. Radcliffe's romances. Such are The Veiled Picture; or, The Mysteries of Gorgono, the Appenine Castle of Signor Androssi, 1802, from The Mysteries of Udolpho; and The Midnight Assassin; or, Confession of the Monk Rinaldi, 1802, from The Italian.

The Monthly Review, March, 1811, Vol. XLIV, p. 313, comments upon a trick by which the names of approved authors are assumed, or almost precisely similar names adopted by inferior writers to impose upon the public. In particular the names of Hamilton, Radcliffe, Burney and Edgeworth have been thus "unwarrantably employed."

The Fate Of Velina De Guidova. By Mrs. Ann Radcliffe 1790

Radzivil, A Romance. Translated from the Russ of the celebrated M. Wocklow. By Mrs. Ann Radcliffe. Both these are the work of Mrs. Mary Ann Radcliffe. Manfroné; or, The One-handed Monk, published by T. F. Hughes, Wigmore Street, 4 vols., 1809, by Mrs. Mary Ann Radcliffe, was more than once reprinted, perhaps mistakenly, perhaps of intent, as the work of the famous Mrs. Ann Radcliffe.

Other spurious attributions to Ann Radcliffe include: L'Abbaye de Grasville, traduit en français par Ducas. 2 vols., Paris: 1798. A version of George Moore's Grasville Abbey, 1797.

Le Tombeau, "ouvrage posthume d'Anne Radcliffe," traduit par H. Chaussier et Bizet. Paris: 1799. The supposed translators are the real authors.

Die Einsiedlerin am Vesuv. Translated by Konrad Adolf Hartleben, who is probably the author. Leipzig, 1801.

Les Visions du Château des Pyrénées, "traduites sur l'édition imprimée à Londres en 1803," par. G. Garnier et Mlle. Zimmermann. (This must be carefully distinguished from Frédéric Soulié's Le Château des Pyrénées, 5 vols., Paris, 1843.)

Le Couvent de Sainte-Catherine, ou les Moeurs du XIIIe siècle, roman historique, actually by the Baroness Caroline d'Audicner, née Wuiet. Paris. 1810.

La Forêt de Montalbana, traduit en français. The translator published this romance as "un ouvrage par l'auteur Les Visions des Pyrénées" Paris, 1813. It is a version of Catharine Cuthbertson's The Forest of Montabano, 1810.

L'Hermite de la Tombe mystérieuse, ou le Fantôme du Vieux Château "anecdote extraite des Annales du XIIIe siècle par Mme. Anne Radcliffe et traduit sur le manuscrit anglais "par le baron de La Mothe-Houdancourt, Paris. 1816. 2 vols., with frontispieces.

Die Todeswette. Translated by Gustav Seller. Pesth. 1830.

Rose d'Altenberg, ou le Spectre dans les ruines: "Manuscrit trouvé dans le portefeuille de feu Anne Radcliffe," par Henri Duval. Paris, 1830. Alexina "imité de l'anglais" par Mme. Brayer de Saint-Léon," Paris, 1813, was translated into English by Margaret Campbell as The Midnight Wanderer; or, A Legend of the Houses of Altenberg and Lindendorf, 1821, which romance was re-translated nine years later by Henri Duval as Rose d'Altenberg, and ascribed to Mrs. Radcliffe.

By a curious error "two works, both dated 1790, have been assigned to Mrs. Radcliffe . . . They are: The Fate of Velina De Guidova; and Radzivil." Godfrey Frank Singer, The Epistolary Novel, University of Philadelphia Press, 1933, p. 127. These are the work of Mrs. Mary Ann Radcliffe, whose Manfroné; or, The One-Handed Monk was so frequently ascribed to the authoress of The Mysteries of Udolpho. I do not find that The Fate of Velina De Guidova and Radzivil are given to Mrs. Ann Radcliffe (née Ward) by any contemporary or indeed by later evidence of any value, and I am inclined to suppose that Mr. Singer remarking that these two novels are by Mrs. Ann Radcliffe has himself presumed an erroneous ascription, not knowing that there were two ladies of the same name.

Gaston de Blondville, ou Henri III tenant son Cour à Kenilworth en Ardennes. Roman . . . traduit de l'anglais par le traducteur des romans de Sir W. Scott [A. J. B. Defauconpret] 3 vol. Paris. 1826.

PLAYS FOUNDED UPON MRS. RADCLIFFE'S NOVELS.

The Castles of Athlin and Dunbayne.

Edgar, or Caledonian Feuds, a tragedy in five acts by George Manners. Produced at Covent Garden, 9 May, 1806, for the benefit of Miss Smith. 8°, 1806.

Halloween; or The Castles Of Athlin and Dunbayne, "a New Grand Scotch Spectacle" by J. C. Cross. In Circusiana. 1809.

A Sicilian Romance.

The Sicilian Romance; or, The Apparition of the Cliffs, An Opera by Henry Siddons. According to Genest "most vilely" done. Produced at Covent Garden, Wednesday, 28 May, 1794, with success.

Julia, ou les Souterrains de Mazzini, "pièce à grand spectacle en trois actes," produced at the théâtre des Jeunes-Artistes, 12 frimaire, an VII, (November, 1798). 8°, 1799.

The Romance of the Forest.

Dramatized by James Boaden as Fontainville Forest in five acts. Produced at Covent Garden, Tuesday, 25 March, 1794. Marquis of Montault, Farren; Lamotte, Pope; Madame Lamotte, Miss Morris; Adeline, Mrs. Pope. Published 8vo. 1794. At Covent Garden, 8 January, 1796, the play was revived as "compressed into 4 acts by the author." Also a melodrama produced at the Surrey on Tuesday, March 9th, 1824, Fontainville Abbey; or, The Phantom of the Forest.

The Mysteries of Udolpho.

The Mysteries of the Castle. An opera by Miles Peter Andrews, who was assisted by Frederick Reynolds. Produced at Covent Garden, 1 January, 1795. Montoni is from The Mysteries of Udolpho, and there are hints from A Sicilian Romance.

Le Testament, ou les Mystères d'Udolphé, a drama in five acts by Larmartelière, produced at the théâtre Louvois, 22 messidor, 1798 (June, 1798). Actually it might be argued that only one or two incidents are directly drawn from Mrs. Radcliffe, although her style and décor are copied wholesale throughout.

Montoni, ou le Château d'Udolphé, a drama in five acts by Alexandre Duval, produced at the théâtre de la Cité, 29 July, 1798. 8°, 1798.

Le Château des Apennins, ou le Fantôme Vivant, drame en cinq actes. By René-Charles Guilbert de Pixérécourt. Produced at the Ambigu comique, 19 frimaire, an VII (9 December, 1799). 8°, 1799.

This was translated into English by John Baylis as The Mysteries of Udolpho; or The Phantom of the Castle, 12mo. 1804. Not acted.

Léon, ou le Château de Montenéro, a drama in 3 acts by Fr. Hoffman and Dalagrac. Produced at the théâtre de la rue Favant, 29 frimaire, an VII (1799). 8°, 1799. A melodrama based on The Mysteries of Udolpho.

The Castle of Udolpho, a Dramatic Opera, was printed, 8vo. 1808, in The Dramatic Apellant, a quarterly publication which only reached three numbers. This work was designed to publish such pieces as had not been accepted by the managers, or else were not intended for production.

The Italian.

The Italian Monk. A play in Three Acts. By James Boaden. Produced at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, Tuesday, 15 August, 1797. Palmer, Schedoni; Charles Kemble, Vivaldi; Miss De Camp, Ellena. 8° (2 editions) 1797.

Éléonore de Rosalba, ou les Ruines de Paluzzi, drama en 4 actes. By Pujos and Dabaytua. Produced at the théâtre de la Cité, 5 June, 1798. 8°, 1798.

Gaston De Blondeville.

Dramatized by Miss Mitford, "because I thought, and still think, that the story, taken from Mrs. Radcliffe's posthumous romance, would be very effective as mere spectacle—a play to look at—upon the stage." Introduction to the Dramatic Works of Mary Russell Mitford, ed. 1854.

RADCLIFFE, MRS. MARY ANN

of Kennington Cross, and later of Wimbledon in Surrey. Characterized by Upcott as "One of the Wollstonecraft school."

Mrs. Mary Ann Radcliffe, (the name is indifferently spelled Mary Anne or Mary-Anne; the surname Radcliffe or Radcliff) later in the nineteenth century was continually and perhaps designedly confused with the famous Mrs. Ann Radcliffe. Thus Manfroné was more than once reprinted in cheap editions as the work of the authoress of The Mysteries of Udolpho. As early as 1832 A. K. Newman & Co. advertise "Manfroné, or the One-handed Monk, by Mrs. Radcliffe, 3rd edition, 4 vols . . . £1. 0. 0," which although strictly correct is apt to mislead, and has in fact proved a source of error. In 1884 N. Bruce of Peterborough Court, Fleet Street, reprinted Manfrone A Romance By Mary Anne Radcliffe, Author of "The Italian," etc.

ANN SOPHIA RADCLIFFE wrote The Ladies Elegant Jester; or, Fun for the Female Sex.

- Regnault-Warin sometimes wrote as Saint-Edmé. The above are the best-known and most representative of his romances. Born at Bar le Duc in 1775, he died at Paris in 1844. He wrote Memoirs, Biographies, and a vast deal of miscellaneous work. He was for some time, in his younger days, rather unwisely mixed up with politics, and the appearance of Le Cimitière de la Madeleine would have been followed by a prosecution and serious results to the writer had it not been for the intervention of Joséphine. Regnault-Warin admired her devotedly, and in 1819 published, 2 vols., 8vo, Mémoires et correspondance de l'impératrice Joséphine. Eugénie Beauharnais, whilst thanking the author warmly for his championship of her mother, was bound to disavow the authenticity of the many elegant letters contained in these two volumes.

REYNOLDS, GEORGE WILLIAM MACARTHUR

There is extant a note in Reynolds' own handwriting which states that he was born at Sandwich, Kent, on July 23rd, 1814. His father, Sir George Reynolds, who had been a post captain of some celebrity in the royal navy, intended him for the army and he entered at Sandhurst in 1828. Sir George, however, died before his son had finished his course leaving him a fortune of £120,000, whilst Lady Reynolds only survived her husband a few months. Thereupon, in 1830, he left Sandhurst, recollections of which he has used in his novels, and travelled on the continent, settling in Paris. Reynolds himself said that he commenced author at the age of twenty, and upon his majority in 1835 he established himself a proprietor of the Librairie des Étrangers, 55 rue Neuve—St. Augustin, at the same time issuing a daily English political newspaper The London and Paris Courier. Upon the failure of these literary ventures which absorbed a large part of his capital, he returned to London and became editor of The Old Monthly Magazine, 1837 and 1838. It was during this time that he commenced Pickwick Abroad which met with great success. It has been shrewdly surmised, although it cannot be certainly known, that in these earlier years he supplied Edward Lloyd, the well-known publisher, with not a few anonymous romances. His study The Modern Literature of France, 2 vols., has much merit and was highly esteemed. In 1839 Robert Macaire followed and proved very successful, whilst Master Timothy's Bookcase ran through five editions in less than four years. As editor of The London Journal, No. 1, March 1st, 1845, Reynolds achieved fame and fortune, and it was in the pages of the Journal that many of his best known works first appeared, serials on a similar plan continuing in Reynolds's Miscellany after his difference with George Stiff, George Vickers, and Abraham Reynolds.

Faust ran in The London Journal from October 4th, 1845, to July 18th, 1846, and enormously increased the circulation of this periodical. The Mysteries of London which Reynolds had commenced early in 1845, and which with its sequel (or continuation) The Mysteries of the Court of London was issued in penny weekly numbers over eleven years, until 1856,, established him as the most popular writer of the day, the only possible rival being J. F. Smith.

From 1840 Reynolds was in charge of the foreign intelligence department of the London Dispatch, but any discussion of his political activities for all that they played so important a part in his life, and the foundation of Reynolds's Weekly Newspaper, No. 1, Sunday, May 5th, lie entirely outside our scope.

In 1848 he was living at Cleasby Villa, Tollington Park, Hornsey. About the year 1844 Reynolds married, and his wife Mrs. Susannah Frances Reynolds enjoyed no small reputation as a novelist, two at least of her works, Gretna Green 1847-8, and Wealth and Poverty, 1848, attaining great popularity and running into several editions. Their eldest son, George Edward Reynolds, died very early when he was scarcely seven years old, (before 1852), and in the old churchyard of Herne where he was buried there is a monument to his memory.

Reynolds was the author of a very large number of works, the last collected edition by John Dicks comprising 28 titles and 36 volumes. To these we can add at least a dozen more names, and yet the tale is by no means complete.

Owing to the serialization of many of his romances in popular journals and the fact that others were published in weekly penny numbers and constantly being most actively set in circulation, reissue following hard on reissue, and edition edition, the Bibliography of G. W. M. Reynolds proves intricate and complicated to the last degree.

Towards the end of his life Reynolds's political views underwent considerable modification. The famous author and once prominent publicist drew further and further into retirement, and I have been given to understand that latterly he had a very deep sense and consciousness of religion. He died on June 17th, 1879. Reynolds left one surviving son, whom I have heard spoken of with affection and respect by men of letters who had enjoyed his friendship. Mr. George Reynolds

- died, I believe, about the year 1922, or perhaps rather earlier, being between seventy and eighty years old.

- Mysteries of London, The* 1845-1850
 Published by George Vickers, 334 Strand.
 Four Series of two volumes each. The Work was published in Weekly Penny Numbers, or Monthly Parts, price Sixpence. Reynolds wrote the First and Second Series, four volumes. The London Journal, Vol. I, No. 1, March 1st, 1845, advertised The Mysteries of London, "Published in Weekly Penny Numbers, and Monthly Sixpenny Parts beautifully Illustrated" by G. W. M. Reynolds, with laudatory notices from the papers: "The author has entered upon his subject well," Weekly Dispatch; "Among the novelties we have a new work from the pen of Mr. G. W. M. Reynolds . . .” Bell’s Life.

No. 52 completed Vol. I., and each volume was furnished with a title-page and Index, forming a Supplementary Number, price 1d. Vol. I., “beautifully bound,” complete was issued on October 23rd, 1845. No. 53 (the first no. of Vol. II) was issued at the end of September, 1845. Vol. II and The First Series were completed with No. 105, published on September 19th, 1846. Vol. II was almost immediately issued, “beautifully bound,” price 6s. 6d.

The Second Series, Vol. III, introducing a new and original tale, commenced with No. 1, issued on October 3rd, 1846, and continued through 52 weekly nos. Vol. III, the First of the Second Series, was advertised on 9th October, 1847, complete, “Now Ready, Beautifully Bound in Red Cloth, Gilt Back and Lettered, Price Six Shillings and Sixpence.” George Vickers, London; A. and W. Galignani, Brussels; Wahlen, Leipzig, Jugel. No. 1 of the Second Volume of the Second Series (Vol. IV), and continued in 52 nos., until 1848.

Reynolds had a difference with George Stiff, the proprietor of the London Journal, and George Vickers the publishers, and severed his connexion with that paper. None the less (see his Address to the Public) Reynolds’s Miscellany, No. 10, p. 160, Vol. I, New Series, September 16th, 1848, he completed the Second Series of The Mysteries of London in 104 Nos. according to his agreement with Mr. Stiff.

The Third Series (two volumes) of The Mysteries of London was entrusted by Stiff to Thomas Miller, whose Godfrey Malvern was being serialized in The London Journal, commencing March, 1849. Godfrey Malvern concluded on August 18th, 1849. Fortunately for the paper J. F. Smith had now been secured as principal writer, and Stanfield Hall had commenced on May 19th, 1849.

The first number of the Third Series of The Mysteries of London, the work of Miller, was published on Wednesday, September 20th, 1848, and ran into the uniform 104 nos., two vols. of 52 nos. each.

G. W. M. Reynolds had now associated himself with John Dicks, and issued Reynolds's Miscellany (First Series). Reynolds's Miscellany, No. 1, New Series, appeared on Saturday, July 15th, 1848. Reynolds strongly protested against a spurious work, Reynolds's Magazine, which was to be imposed upon the public in lieu of Reynolds's Miscellany. Legal proceedings were instituted in consequence of the "scandalous opposition got up by Mr. Stiff, George Vickers, and Abraham Reynolds, through the medium of Reynolds's Magazine." Miller's Third Series (2 vols.) is not as well written as Reynolds' First and Second Series, and there was felt to be a distinct falling-off, which caused the proprietor of The London Journal to commission the Fourth Series of The Mysteries of London (2 vols.) from Edward Lemau Blanchard, who thus wrote The Mysteries of London; or, Lights and Shadows of London Life, 2 vols., 52 penny nos. each, 1849-50, number 1 being published on Saturday, September 22nd, 1849.

Blanchard's work falls far below Reynolds.

The Mysteries of London was frequently re-issued both by George Vickers, and (Series I and II, Reynolds' work) by John Dicks. A new edition, 2 vols., bound in red cloth. Each series 13s., the two series £1 6s.; single volumes 6s. 6d. W. M. Clark, Paternoster Row. 1854.

Dicks (c. 1890) advertises, First and Second Series, each series of 2 vols., complete in itself, price 13s. An American édition de luxe with new illustrations was issued in six volumes about 1900.

A melodrama, The Mysteries of London, founded upon Reynolds's romance (to date) was produced at the Marylebone Theatre, London, on May 18th, 1846.

Reynolds's Miscellany, Old Series was in three Volumes. Vol. I, 4s.; Vol. II, 3s. 6d.; Vol. III, 4s. These contained as serials Wagner and the Days of Hogarth.

The Mysteries of the Court of London 1848-56

Published by John Dicks.

Reynolds had prepared a vast amount of matter for a Third Series of The Mysteries of London and this he utilized under another Title, The Mysteries of the Court of London. Thus the First Series, 2 vols., of The Mysteries of the Court of London is precisely the same tale which it had been his intention to give as the Third Series of The Mysteries of London. Reynolds's Miscellany, No. 10, Vol. I (p. 160) New Series, September 16th, 1848.

The Mysteries of the Court of London, illustrated by Henry Anelay, weekly Penny Numbers, Monthly Sixpenny Parts, commenced (No. 1) in September, 1848. The work ran into Four Series of 2 volumes each. At the end of Vol. VIII (the second volume of the Fourth Series), No. 102, Reynolds has a Postscript in which he says that "Every week, without a single intermission during a period of eight years, has a Number under this title been issued to the public. Its precensor The Mysteries of London ranged over four years. [He does not, of course, recognize Miller and Blanchard's work.] For twelve years, therefore, have I hebdomadally issued to the world a fragmentary portion of that which, as one vast whole, may be termed an Encyclopædia of Tales. This Encyclopædia consists of twelve volumes, comprising six hundred and twenty-four weekly Numbers. Each Number has occupied me upon an average seven hours in the composition . . . four thousand three hundred and sixty-eight hours." He adds that his regularity of routine "will account to the public for the facility with which I have been enabled to write so many other works during the same period, and yet to allow myself ample leisure for recreation and for healthful exercise."

In the Third and Fourth Series of The Mysteries of the Court of London the incidents have little or no reference to the British Court. Yet, Reynolds argues that the title cannot be regarded as a misnomer, since the Royal Court in the proper acceptance of the term is not limited to the circle of the Sovereign but includes the aristocracy, and these tales deal with persons of highest quality if not actually with royalty itself.

The Mysteries of the Court of London was several times re-issued by John Dicks. The first re-issue (in penny nos.) of the First Series commenced on Saturday, February 22nd, 1851. Dicks (c. 1890) advertises The Mysteries of the Court of London. First, Second, Third and Fourth Series. Series of 2 vols. Each complete in itself, price 13s.

The Coral Island; or, The Hereditary Curse 1848-9

- In 1862 re-issued as Rosa Lambert; or, The Memoirs of a Clergyman's Daughter.
- Rosa Lambert* is sometimes said to have been suppressed under its first sub-title The Memoirs of an Unfortunate Woman.
- Rose Somerville; or, A Husband's Mystery* 1853
- The First False Step; or, The Path of Crime* 1853
- "To the People of the United States. I appeal to you against an atrocious imposture just perpetrated by STRINGER AND TOWNSEND, Booksellers, of No. 222 Broadway, New York. These unprincipled scoundrels have printed and published two books respectively entitled Rose Somerville; or, A Husband's Mystery and The First False Step; or, The Path of Crime. Both these works are represented as being written by me, and have my name on the title-page. I declare solemnly that I never wrote them: I never saw them until now: I never heard of them until now. . . .

The names of Stringer and Townsend should be gibbeted as those of men who are infinitely worse than mere pirates: they are downright rogues, imposters, and forgers . . . GEORGE W. M. REYNOLDS." From Reynolds's Miscellany, Saturday, July 23rd, 1853. Reynolds's works were long shamelessly pirated in America editions, and more, there were freely circulated in the United States a large number of spurious fictions (as above) bearing his name.

Rose Summerville; or, A Husband's Mystery and a Wife's Devotion, first edition, 1847, is the work of Ellen T——.

The First False Step; or, The Path of Crime, first edition, 1846, is by Thomas Peckett Prest.

The Rye House Plot; or, Ruth the Conspirator's Daughter

Commenced as a Serial in Reynolds's Miscellany, on Saturday, June 18th, 1853, concluding 1854.

The Gipsy Boy

Worries of Mr. Chickpick

The Dangers of Circumstantial Evidence

Mary Stuart, Queen of Scotland

Leila; or, The Star of Mingrelia

Omar, A Tale of the Crimean War

May Middleton: A Tale of a Fortune

For these four last romances see under the John Dicks Collected Edition of Reynolds.

The Young Fisherman; The Two Christmas Days;

The Baroness of Grandmanoir; The Warrior's Love;

The Odalisque; The Broken Statue; The Gipsy Boy;

Worries of Mr. Chickpick; and The Dangers of Circumstantial Evidence were reprinted in one volume.

I have thought it of interest to reprint this extract from

The Bookseller, but it should be remarked that the list is very inexact. This serves to show that even during his lifetime it was difficult to catalogue the genuine work of Reynolds. It may be noted that The Book- seller attributes to him novels by his wife Susannah

Frances Reynolds, Gretna Green; by Hannah Maria

Jones, The Gipsy Chief; by Gabriel Alexander,

Robert Bruce and Wallace; as also by other writers.

Mysteries of the Court of Naples is probably "The Neapolitan Romance," The Coral Island; or, The

Hereditary Curse, although this has been duly recorded under its proper title.

In a similar way in certain American reprints Canon-

Bury House becomes Mysteries of the Court of Queen

Elizabeth.

RICKMAN, THOMAS CLIO

An eccentric bookseller of Upper Mary-le-bone Street, London. He became entirely unbalanced. In addition to the following tale he wrote several foolish copies of verse and miscellaneous scraps.

The Evening Walk, a Tale, 8vo.

RITCHIE, LEITCH (1800-1865)

For Leitch Ritchie see the Dictionary of National Biography. He was a miscellaneous writer and editor of varied activities and no inconsiderable merit. His contributions to volumes of artistic travel are highly and justly esteemed. The following titles fairly represent his work in romantic fiction.

The Game of Life

London Nights Entertainments

1833

Schinderhannes, The Robber of the Rhine

1833

The Library of Romance, 15 volumes

Edited by Leitch Ritchie.

The Magician

Wearyfoot Common

1855

The New Shilling

1857

The Midnight Journey

1871

With tales of Mrs. Crowe and others. Reprinted from Chambers' Journal.

ROBERTS, EDWIN F.

For many years a constant contributor to Reynolds's Miscellany, and a most prolific miscellaneous writer. His residence was 27 Tavistock Street, Covent Garden. The following are but a few of his very many works.

SADE, DONATIEN ALPHONSE FRANCOIS, MARQUIS (more strictly Comte) DE (1740-1814)

Les Infortunes de la Vertu

1787

The original version of Justine, first printed 1930, texte établi sur le manuscrit original autographe et publié pour la première fois. Paris. Editions Fourcade, in—16. 1930. The original version of Justine was written in the Bastille, 1787-8, but never published until 1930—"avec une introduction par Maurice Heine," pp. liv, and 206.

Justine, ou Les Malheurs de la Vertu

"O mon ami! la prospérité du crime est comme la foudre, dont les feux trompeurs n'embellissent un instant l'atmosphère, que pour précipiter dans les abîmes de la mort, le malheureux qu'ils ont ébloui." En Hollande, chez les Libraires associés [Paris]. 2 vols., 8vo. 1791. Vol. I, 283 pp., Vol. II, 191 pp. The frontispiece by Chéry, sculp. Carrée, is symbolical. This is the first edition of Justine, which was afterwards so curiously amplified, and it is the text followed in the sole English translation Opus Sadicum a philosophical Romance For the First Time Translated From the Original French (Holland, 1791). With an engraved frontispiece Paris Isidore Liseux 19, Passage Choiseul 1889. This version betrays an extremely inadequate knowledge of English, and many passages of the work (admittedly most difficult to render) are even grotesque in their barbarisms and distortion.

Text as the first edition. Ibid. 2 vols. 12mo.Justine, ou les Malheurs de la Vertu

1792

2 vols., 16mo. A Londres [Paris]. With additional episodes.

Justine, ou les Malheurs de la Vertu

3me édition. A Philadelphie [Paris]. 2 vols., 18mo.

Justine, ou les Malheurs de la Vertu

A Londres [Paris] 4 vols., 18mo. Amplified with yet further episodes.

Troisième édition. Corrigée et augmentée. 4 vols.

18mo. En Hollande, an 1800. [Paris.] Vol. I, ix, + 136 pp.; Vol. II, 136 pp.; Vol. III, 135 pp.; Vol. IV, 132 pp. No illustrations.

In spite of "Troisième édition" this is actually the Sixth Edition. Although published after the issue of the Nouvelle Justine and Juliette, the text is altogether different from the definitive edition of 1797, and is with some few very slight modifications that of the First Edition, 2 vols., 8vo., 1791.

Juliette, ou la suite de Justine

4 vols., 8vo. No place of publication, but certainly Paris.

La Nouvelle Justine, ou Les Malheurs de la Vertu, suivie de l'Histoire de Juliette, sa soeur

Ouvrage orné d'un frontispiece et de cent sujets gravés avec soin.

On n'est point crimine pour faire la peinture

Des bizarres penchants qu'inspire la nature.

En Hollande [Paris], 10 vols., 18mo. The publisher was Bertrandet. Justine occupies 4 vols., Vol. I, viii + 347 pp.; Vol. II, 351 pp.; Vol. III, 356 pp.; Vol. IV, 366 pp.; with 40 illustrations, and Frontispiece to the whole work.

Juliette occupies 6 vols., Vol. V, 371 pp.; Vol. VI, 360 pp.; Vol. VII, 357 pp.; Vol. VIII, 371 pp.; Vol. IX, 370 pp.; and Vol. X, 352 pp.; with 60 illustrations. A later issue of this edition is said to contain 104 illustrations. This is the complete and definitive edition of Justine and Juliette, and it is this which has been frequently reprinted.

Aline et Valcour, ou Le Roman philosophique, Ecrit à la Bastille un an avant la Révolution de France. 14 gravures. Par le citoyen S—. A Paris, chez Girouard, Libraire, rue du Bout-de-Monde, No. 47. 8 parts in 4 vols., 18mo.

An abridged and pirated edition of Aline et Valcour. The names are changed.

La Philosophie dans le Boudoir, ouvrage posthume de l'auteur de Justine. "La mère en prescrira la lecture à sa fille." A Londres [Paris]. Aux dépens de la Compagnie. MDCCXCXV [sic]

2 vols., 18mo. Vol. I, 180 pp.; Vol. II, 214 pp. Frontispiece, and 4 illustrations, 2 in each volume. Posthume was intentional, in order to mislead.

La Philosophie dans le Boudoir consists of seven dialogues, the interlocutors expressing in detail de Sade's theories and ideas. The book has frequently been reprinted. A good edition is Londres [Paris], MDCCXCXV, actually about 1835, two parts in one vol., 18mo., "avec 10 lithos libres," in which the persons are dressed in the mode of 1830.

Oxtiern, ou les Malheurs du Libertinage; drame en 3 actes et en prose, par D.A.F.S. A Versailles: Blaizot. 8vo. An VIII.

Produced at the Théâtre Molière, Rue Saint-Martin, October 22nd, 1791. Originally called Le Comte Oxtiern, ou les Effets du Libertinage.

Les Crimes de l'Amour, ou le Délire des Passions.

Nouvelles historiques et tragiques, précédées d'une Idée sur les Romans, par D. A. F. Sade, auteur

d'Aline et Valcour. A Paris: chez Massé. An VIII

4 vols., 12mo.; and 2 vols., 8vo. With 4 illustrations. There are various modern reprints of isolated items from Les Crimes de l'Amour with illustrations by modern artists.

The essay Idée sur les Romans, 47 pages, is of great importance, and it has been reprinted separately by Octave Uzanne, 12mo., Paris, E. Rouveyre, 1878.

De Sade has a rapid survey of the History of Fiction—M. G. Lewis and Mrs. Radcliffe are mentioned—and he defines the novel, discussing the qualifications for a good novelist. His quotations from Young's Night Thoughts in Les Crimes de l'Amour should be remarked.

The Nouvelles historiques et tragiques are eleven in number:

Juliette et Raunai, ou la Conspiration d'Amboise

La Double Épreuve

Miss Henriette Stralson, ou les Effets du Désespoir.

Nouvelle Anglaise

Faxelange, ou les Torts de l'Ambition

Florville et Courval, ou le Fatalisme

Eugénie de Franval. Written in March, 1788.

Mons Maurice Heine in his Œuvres Choisies et Pages Magistrales du Marquis de Sade, Paris, M.CM. XXXIII, Tome I, has included La Double Épreuve and Eugénie de Franval, with Emilie de Tourville and Il y a Place pour deux which he has printed from the Contes et Fabliaux.

Zoloé et ses deux Acolytes, ou Quelques décades de la vie de Trois Jolies femmes, Histoire véritable du siècle dernier, par Un Contemporain. A Turin; se trouve à Paris, chez tous les marchands de nouveautés.

De l'imprimerie de l'auteur, Messidor, an VIII

One vol., 12mo., xii + 142 pp.; frontispiece, Lepagelet sc. Published July, 1800. There are at least two reprints of the same year. Zoloé has been reprinted several times and there are editions with free illustrations. A political roman à clef Joséphine [Zoloé], Madame Tallien [Laureda], Madame Visconti [Volsange], Bonaparte [d'Orsec], and other important figures of the time. This libertine libel on the First Consul and his circle caused a terrific scandal, and led to De Sade's final imprisonment.

Les 120 Journées de Sodome, ou l'École du Libertinage

par le Marquis de Sade. Publié pour le première fois d'après le manuscrit original, avec des annotations scientifiques par le Dr. Eugène Duhren. Paris: Club des Bibliophiles. Imperial 8vo., 1904. 200 copies. Written in 1785. Another ed., Paris, 3 vols., edited by Maurice Heine, Stendhal et Compagnie, 4to., 1931-35. Definitive edition originally planned as Vols. II and III of the issue of De Sade's works by the "Société du Roman Philosophique." But see below.

L'Auteur des Crimes de l'Amour à Villeterque, folliculaire. 12mo. Paris: Massé. An IX 1801

A pamphlet of 19 pages. Villeterque in the Journal de Paris, October 22nd, 1800, had sharply attacked the publication of Les Crimes de l'Amour.

Couplets chantés à Son Eminence le Cardinal Maury, le 6 Octobre 1812, à la maison de santé pres de Charenton 1812

Published in the Revue Rétrospective, Vol. I, p. 262, Paris: 1833.

A definitive edition of De Sade was projected by the Société du Roman Philosophique. To date three volumes have been issued. The arrangements were: I, Historiettes, Contes et Fabliaux (from the original MSS.). II and III, Les 120 Journées de Sodome. It was intended that there should have been two volumes of the text. A third volume would have been in the nature of a critical supplement, with an excursus, textual notes, and a general commentary. Three volumes were actually published, as noted above, 1931-35. One volume was issued in 1931. The two following volumes were both issued in 1935. On the failure of the publishers, the text was completed as promised to their subscribers, but the critical supplement, etc., as announced never appeared. The three volumes therefore are all text, and the third volume is only about half the thickness of each of the first two.

IV, Lettres inédites. Unpublished. However, in 1929 was issued Correspondence inédite du Marquis de Sade, "de ses proches et de ses familiers, publiée avec une introduction des annales et des notes par Paul Bourdin." Paris: Libraire de France. 110 Boulevard Saint-Germain. 1929. 4to., pp. xlix and 450.

For further details of the Bibliography of De Sade the authoritative and particular studies of this author must be consulted. In French there is the work of Mons. Maurice Heine. In English the standard work on De Sade is The Marquis De Sade His Life and Works by C. R. Dawes, 1927. This is furnished with a valuable bibliography.

De Sade left a vast number of manuscripts, and among this material are many romances. Three or four lines traced upon the cover of the twentieth and last note book containing his autograph MSS. state that he composed fifty novels, stories, and romances. Of these, sixteen, short tales were to be collected as Historiettes and are put together under a general title le Portefeuille d'un homme de lettres. Thirty more, classed as "gaies ou sombres" and introduced by an Avertissement were intended to make up four volumes of Contes et Fabliaux du XVIIIe siècle par un troubadour provençal. Of the four that remain one was to be utilized as a supplement, Les Filous; a second, Les Infortunes de la Vertu was to be amplified, and is actually the first draft of Justine; two, Seide, conte moral et philosophique and L'Epoux complaisant the author was inclined to withdraw. All these were written at the Bastille in 1787 and 1788, and are contained in twenty note books of 48 pages apiece. De Sade's writing is extremely minute. Eighteen of these note books are now preserved at the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris. Nos. II and VII are missing. In these lost cahiers were six historiettes, la Liste du Suisse; la Messe trop chère; l'honnête Ivrogne; N'y allez jamais sans lumière; le Justice venetienne; and Adélaïde de Miramas, ou le Fanatisme protestant. There were also five contes, la fine Mouche; l'heureux Exchange; la Foyer du sang; les Reliques; le Curé de Prato. The conclusion of la Marquise de Talême is also lacking.

Among the romances which De Sade left in MS. may be further particularized:

Isabelle de Bavière, reine de France. Roman historique. 3 vols.

Adélaïde de Brunswick, princesse de Saxe. Roman. 2 vols.

Conrad. An historical romance of the Albigenses.

Marcel: Roman.

Pholoé et Zénocrate. An epistolary novel. Unfinished.

Les Journées de Florbelle, ou la Nature dévoilée, suivies des Mémoires de l'abbé de Modore et des Aventures d'Emilie de Volnange, etc. De Sade commenced this romance on March 5th, 1806, and completed the first volume on the following July 10th. It was then named Mémoires d'Emilie de Valrose ou les Egaremens du libertinage. Later, as a variant, he considered Le Triomphe du Vice, ou la véritable Histoire de Modore. On April 25th, 1807, he decided upon Les Journées de Florbelle, etc., and wrote that this title was now "adopté invariablement." The romance was to be in 10 volumes, the last four of which occupy no less than 72 note books.

There are in existence other sketches, for the most part very fragmentary, for romances and shorter tales in the minuscular handwriting of De Sade.

De Sade's work was certainly known to M. G. Lewis, Francis Lathom, and other English Gothic novelists. With regard to Lewis Mons. Maurice Heine has a passage which to my mind puts the matter beyond a doubt even if there were not other ample evidence that "The Monk" was very well acquainted with De Sade. Commenting upon the suggestion that Lewis drew from Diderot, which is to say the least very far-fetched, Mons. Heine writes: "S'il nous est permis, à notre tour d'émettre une hypothèse, nous voyons mieux ce jeune homme de seize ans, à la faveur du voyage qu'il fit à Paris en 1792, acquérant un exemplaire de Justine, dont la troisième édition venait alors de paraître dans la célèbre collection de Cazin."

For the connexion between De Sade and the Gothic Novel Mons. Maurice Heine, Le Marquis De Sade et Le Roman Noir, Paris, 1933 (originally in La Nouvelle Revue Française) should be consulted. Although brief, this is an important essay. It is true that the note on p. 6 which urges a sharp distinction between the roman gothique and the roman noir is debatable, but this is an intricate point, and I fear Mons. Heine does Walpole less than justice. It is rash, for example, to say "rien de viable n'est issu en droite ligne du Château d'Otrante." On the other hand, there has been much tiresome exaggeration in the other direction.

Promenade à travers le Roman noir, by Mons. Heine which appeared in Minotaure, No. 5, 1934, makes some interesting points which should not be overlooked.

The Encyclopædia Britannica, Ninth Ed., 1876, Vol. V, p. 601, says: "The English school of chess commenced about the beginning of the present [nineteenth] century, and Sarratt was its first leader. He flourished from 1808 to 1821 and was followed by his great pupil, W. Lewis."

J. H. Sarratt is a famous name in the annals of British Chess. The date of his birth is not known, but in 1807 he was established in London as a schoolmaster, and enjoyed some reputation as an elegant Latin scholar and a literary man. He married an actress, Camilla Dufour. This lady, who was much admired as a dancer and who was long a favourite at the minor theatres, had herself published (1803) a novel Aurora; or, The Mysterious Beauty, translated from the French. She also contributed to various periodical publications. In the Chess world J. H. Sarratt came into prominence as a member of the London Chess Club, which was organized in 1807 at Tom's Coffee House, Cornhill. Sarratt was one of the earliest members. At the "Chess Club" or "Parsloe's" in St. James Street, a French expert, Verdoni, has been engaged to succeed the famous François André Damian Philidor, who died in 1795, and it has been said that Verdoni had a share in the creation of an English School of Chess owing to his influence on the first Englishman to become a master, J. H. Sarratt. In 1808 Sarratt published A Treatise on the Game of Chess, 2 vols., 8vo. With the exception of a small volume, "Sold only at Slaughter's Coffee House," The Noble Game of Chess, 1735, by Captain Joseph Bertin, Sarratt's Treatise is the first original work on Chess in English. It is dedicated to a wealthy Chess amateur, Abraham Samuda, Esq. Sarratt already styles himself "Professor of Chess," and he is spoken of as "the great J. H. Sarratt, whose fee was a guinea a lesson."

In 1813 Sarratt produced a second book on Chess, The Works of Damiano, Ruy Lopez, and Salvio, one vol., 8vo. Dedicated to "the Right Hon. the Lord Viscount Pollington, M.R." He added a commentary of his own on the conduct of the various games, and also included a game from a rare treatise on Chess by Dr. Ercole del Rio, published at Modena in 1769.

In 1817 Sarratt brought out his The Works of Gianutio and Gustavus Selenus on Chess, 2 vols., in which he included as those of "an eminent player in the beginning of the eighteenth century" thirteen of Bertin's games from The Noble Game of Chess, 1735. When he died, 1820, Sarratt was engaged upon an original work A New Treatise on the Game of Chess which was published, 2 vols., 396 pages in all, in 1821 as by "J. H. Sarratt, Professor of Chess, and Author of Several Publications on this Game." It was dedicated to Sir Frederick Gustavus Fowke, Bt., of Lowesby Hall, Leicestershire. Sarratt's chief pupil, William Lewis (1787-1870) edited the MS. and saw it through the press. Lewis had by now left the office which he entered when he came to London about 1812, and made the game of Chess his principal means of livelihood. As a frequenter of Tom's Coffee House he met Sarratt among whose pupils he was soon enrolled.

In 1822 Lewis edited a Second Edition of the New Treatise, "Revised and Improved, with additional notes and remarks by W. Lewis, Teacher of Chess." The two volumes have become one of 352 pp., there are a good many alterations and modifications in the text, diagrams are substituted for long and detailed descriptions of the positions of the pieces, and the price was notably reduced.

Upon Sarratt's death Lewis was the acknowledged leader of London Chess.

There is no account of J. H. Sarratt in the Dictionary of National Biography where he should have had a place.

SEXTON BLAKE

The names of Sexton Blake the detective, his assistant Tinker, and the bloodhound Pedro, are so famous in the annals of sensational fiction that a brief note may be not unacceptable.

The first Sexton Blake story, Sexton Blake, Detective appeared on May 4th, 1894, in the second number of a recently established halfpenny paper, The Union Jack. At first little notice was attracted, and for some months Sexton Blake was ignored. Later, however, when a second and a third story were published Sexton Blake speedily became so great a favourite that every week for thirty-nine years The Union Jack printed an episode of Sexton Blake. In February, 1933, the paper was renamed The Detective Weekly with Blake as the principal figure.

In 1915 began to appear the Sexton Blake Library, originally published at 3d., but afterwards at 4d. Sexton Blake stories and series of stories also appeared in various magazines.

In 1938 The Sexton Blake Library had reached its one thousand and second number. A Sexton Blake Annual, coloured wrappers, was published in 1938, and this advertises "Further Adventures of Sexton Blake appear every month in Sexton Blake Library, Price 4d., and every Thursday in Detective Weekly, Price 2d."

Naturally so many thousands of stories, the work of a large number of authors, and the incidents, one and all, centring round Sexton Blake, cannot maintain an equal level, but it is only fair to say that the best of the tales are written with great spirit and vigour and often unravel a most ingenious plot. Nor is it untrue to add that the mediocre and indifferent specimens are very few and far between.

The two Sickelmores, father and son, were printers and publishers at Brighton. Richard Sickelmore, Sen., issued for the most part works of local interest, such as Attree's Topography of Brighton, Brighton Herald Printing Office, North Street, 1809; a second edition, 1810, and subsequent editions. Richard Sickelmore, Jun., was well known as a busy miscellaneous writer. In addition to his novels he wrote a number of plays for which see below, and of which there is some notice in The Gothic Quest by Montague Summers, pp. 363-4. Several of these slight pieces were performed at the Brighton Theatre. Originally the Sickelmores lived in North Street, and Mrs. Sickelmore let lodgings. At the trial of John Motherhill (who was acquitted) for a rape on the body of Miss Catharine Wade, Assize holden at East Grinstead, County of Sussex, on Tuesday, March 21st, 1786, before Judge Ashhurst, the house of Mr.

Sickelmore in North Street, Brighton, was mentioned, since Mr. Wade lodged here. Mrs. Ann Sickelmore gave evidence that the said Mr. Wade, Master of Ceremonies, lodged in her house. See The Cuckold's Chronicle, 1793, Vol. I, p. 50 and p. 80. In 1823 R. Sickelmore, Jun. and Co. had a printing and publishing office in Gleaner Street, Brighton. The following year he was in Cavendish Street, St. James Street. In 1827 he issued Views of Brighton from 26 King's Road.

The dramatic work of Richard Sickelmore comprises : The Dream. A Serio-Dramatic Piece. Acted, Theatre Royal, Brighton, August 23rd, 1796, 8vo. Lewes, 1797.

Henry Siddons was the eldest child of the famous tragedienne. He was himself a finished actor and a dramatist of no mediocre talent. His opera, with music by W. Reeve, The Sicilian Romance; or, The Apparition of the Cliffs founded upon Mrs. Radcliffe's A Sicilian Romance, produced at Covent Garden, Wednesday, May 28th, 1794, proved very successful, although according to Genest, "Most vilely" done. His wife, Mrs. Henry Siddons, was a favourite romantic actress. For the ten plays of Henry Siddons consult the Biographia Dramatica, and further Genest.

SMITH, MISS CHARLOTTE

The Republican's Mistress

1821

SMITH, JOHN FREDERICK (1803-1890)

John Frederick Smith was the son of George Smith, manager of the Norwich circuit. George Smith, who was also in the theatrical profession (a brother, not as sometimes been supposed the father of the novelist) died aged 78 at Grimsby, on December 19th, 1877. It may be remembered that Francis Lathom belonged to the Norwich Theatre. Smith whilst in his teens wrote several dramas of which there seems to be nothing more than a local record and which probably were never printed, The Idiot; Deaf and Dumb (a plagiarism for his father's theatre of Holcroft's famous play); The Hoaxing Trio, a farce; and others. His first published piece appears to be The Siege of Colchester, 1824. Smith resided for some years in Rome, where he was known to and in some degree a protégé of the powerful Cardinal Fesch. He was educated by the Jesuits, and was himself (it is said) a member of the Society of Jesus. That he was in after life created a Papal Count by Gregory XVI is a mere canard. It is incidentally recorded that in 1830 the "heavy man" of the Theatre Royal, Norwich, was the manager's son, J. F. Smith. Two years later he was living in London, at Augustus Square, Regent's Park. He now devoted himself wholly to literature and was working (not exclusively) for Edward Lloyd, the publisher, then of Broad Street, Bloomsbury. In 1849 Smith had joined the staff of The London Journal, and proved the mainstay of this popular paper for half-a-dozen years. At the end of 1855 he left George Vickers, the proprietor of The London Journal somewhat abruptly, and became a contributor to (Mr. John) Cassell's Illustrated Family Paper, a position he had been induced to accept by no inconsiderable fees. Ten years later (1865) he took himself back to The London Journal, whilst the copyright of the stories he had written for Cassell were purchased by Vickers for £1,000, in those days a very large sum. His popularity long undiminished, although owing to his too ample charities and generosity he was largely imposed upon, and his fortune wasted. The late Mr. Frank Jay, a great authority, says that Smith was always "a pure Bohemian," but that he lived even whilst at the height of his popularity in a very retired way in a boarding-house at Bloomsbury, his increasing deafness precluding him from intimacy with his fellow-authors. With Vol. VII (New Series) of The London Journal, No. 363, November 25th, 1890, was presented a large sheet pictorial almanac depicting a number of favourite actresses and society beauties, Miss Winifred Emery, Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Mary Anderson, Madame Albani, Adeline Patti, Lady Brooke, Lady Dunlop, Nikita (?), the Countess of Zetland, and Lady Randolph Churchill, all encircling a centre portrait of John Frederick Smith.

Smith crossed to America where he re-published many of his old tales and wrote some new romances the titles of which it is baffling to trace. Dick and Fitzgerald of 18 Ann Street, New York, issued in paper covers at 75 cents and a dollar a very lengthy series of "J. F. Smith's Celebrated Novels." Here the longer fictions are often in two volumes and have been re-named. Thus Phases of Life; or, A Peep Behind the Scenes (1856) becomes Harold Tracy; or, Phases of Life and Bella Trelawney; or, Time Works Wonders.

The actual day of Smith's death in New York is uncertain, but it occurred early in March, 1890, and the famous writer passed away in obscurity, if not indeed in actual want. Of English newspapers only two recorded his decease, the London Star, and The Athenæum, March 15th, 1890.

A portrait of Smith was published in Cassell's Illustrated Family Paper, May 22nd, 1858.

- Cassell's History of England* 1857-62
 Publication, 1857; 1858, 2 vols.; 1860; 1861; and 1862.
- Mr. John Cassell offered J. F. Smith a contract to write The History of England on account of the vivid style and historical research shown in his Lives of the Queens of England, and Smith agreed to undertake the work. However, he did not proceed further than the sixtieth chapter of Vol. I, which brings the history down to the end of the reign of Edward I.
- The Substance and the Shadow* 1858-9
Cassell's, commencing No. 53, December 4th, 1858.

- Black Bess; or, The Knight of the Road* 1863-8
 254 penny weekly numbers, 2,028 pages.
- E. Harrison, Salisbury Court, Fleet Street. The Preface to the first completed issue is dated 1868. The book was fathered and signed by Edward Viles, but was written for him by J. F. Smith at (it is said) a fee of £3 10s. per number.
- False Steps* 1864
Cassell's, commencing No. 326, February 27th, 1864.
 In 1865 Smith rejoined The London Journal.
- Sir Bernard Gaston; or, The Secret of Moultree Hall* 1867 Published, New York.
- During his later years Smith, who had made his home in New York, wrote and published a number of romances, of which several seem to have been little more than adaptations of his earlier work.

In 1863-64 The London Journal was publishing every week in Supplementary Numbers J. F. Smith's "Best Tales" with the original Illustrations by John Gilbert, Esq., "To be had with or without the current number. Price 1d. Monthly Parts, price 6d." The Will and the Way; Woman and Her Master; Temptation; Stanfield Hall; Amy Lawrence; were all re-issued in this form. In 1862-3 The Guide was published, Vol. I "containing the popular tale of 'Minnigrey' complete, price 4s. 6d."

SOUTHWORTH, MRS. EMMA DOROTHY ELIZA
NEVITTE

Born at Washington, December 26th, 1819. Died at Washington, June 30th, 1899. Mrs. Southworth published more than 60 novels. The uniform edition of her works, Philadelphia 1872, collected to that date 42 stories, and even so is not complete. She taught in a school from 1844-49, during which years she contributed to The Irish Refugee, The Baltimore Saturday Visitor, and other papers. Her first novel Retribution, written for The National Era, grew from a short story to a full-length fiction, and was published separately, New York, 1849. Her last novel was The Fatal Secret.

Philadelphia, 1853. London, 1853.

The Tree and False Heiress 1855

Serialized in The London Journal, commencing March 3rd, and concluding June 23rd, 1855.

The Lost Heiress 1855

Philadelphia, 1855. London ed., Milner, 1878.

The True and The False Heiress and The Lost Heiress are the same tale, but with many variations. The first version has an English setting. The second is American. Chapter I of the first commences: "It was the flat, waste coast of Arundel," and later, Chapter XII, there is an excursion down the Thames. In the second version we begin: "It was the flat, waste coast of A—I county, on the Chesapeake,” and the excursion is through a “bay miscalled S——n River.” In the English version the negroes Big Len, Little Len, Aunt Moll, Little Moll, lose their individuality and become rather commonplace. The President’s reception in The Lost Heiress is changed to a large London ball. These variants in Mrs. Southworth’s novels, the different names of her characters, the alteration of titles, make her bibliography if attempted in detail, very intricate, difficult, and diffuse.

 There seem no grounds for supposing "Horace Vere" to be a pseudonym.
- VERRI, COUNT ALESSANDRO (1741-1816) 1825
The Roman Nights at the Tomb of the Scipios
 Translated by Miss Cornelia Ellis Knight from the Italian of Verri, Le Notte Romane al sepolcro de' Scipioni. There is a French version, 1812. A famous work of Verri is: Le Avventure di Saffo poetessa di Mitilene, traduzione dal Greco originale nuovamente scoperto. [Rather an original romance in Italian by Verri.] 188 pp., 8vo., Vercelli, 1780, and 1804. Also: Le Avventure di Saffo poetessa di Mitilene, e la Faoniade [by G. V. Imperiale] inni ed odi, traduzioni del greco. 24mo., Paris, 1790.

- VICTOR, BENJAMIN (-1778)
The Widow of the Wood 1755
- VILES, EDWARD
Black Bess; or The Knight of the Road 1863-68
The Black Highwayman (second series of Black Bess) 1866-68
Blueskin 1866-67
The Illustrated London Novelist. 24 nos. 1864
Gentleman Clifford; or, The Lady's Highway. 35 nos. 1865
Will Scarlett; or, The Outlaw of Sherwood, 40 nos. 1865
 Actually the famous Black Bess was the work of J. F. Smith. Viles fathered the book, and many other sensational romances. He is said to have written little or nothing himself, but he was always most generous to his "ghosts," and notwithstanding his one weakness to pose as an author there was no kinder-hearted man, none more ready to help and relieve. Mr. Edgar Lee, who died in December, 1908, and who acted for about two years as secretary to Viles had many stories of his charities, as humbly hidden as they were tender and unfailing. Robert Louis Stevenson offered Viles the MS. of Treasure Island. A week later, Viles replied that he did not think much of the stuff, but he would purchase the tale to be re-written by a more competent hand. Stevenson called for the return of the MS., and soon after sought an interview with Edward Viles.

The Mysterious Mother. A Tragedy 1768
- WALSH, MISS. Daughter of Captain Walsh, R.N.
The Officer's Daughter; or, A Visit to Ireland
- WALTER, WILLIAM JOSEPH (c. 1790-1855)
The Two Martyrs; or, The Triumph of the Christian Religion 1812
 Translated from Les Martyrs (1809) of Chateaubriand. William Joseph Walter was an alumnus of S. Edmund's College, St. Omer. An interesting literary figure, he turned into English the libretti of several operas, Otello, Medea in Corinte, Tancredi, Der Zauberflote, and other. He also wrote works upon the Mass, a study of the Catholic poet the Bl. Robert Southwell, and a life of S. Thomas More. There is no account of Walter in the Catholic Encyclopædia, where his name ought to occur.

WARD, MRS. CATHERINE GEORGE, afterwards MRS. MASON (1787-)

There seems no foundation for the suggestion that Mrs. Ward was an American. This appears to have arisen owing to the fact that many, if indeed not all, of her novels were promptly pirated. Thus we have The Cottage on the Cliff, Philadelphia, 1823, and The Mysterious Marriage, New York, 1869. It was erroneously supposed that this latter was Mrs. Ward's last work, and that New York, 1869, was the original edition, which actually is London, Virtue, 1821.

- The Knight of the White Banner; or, The Scouts of the Castle* 1827
The Eve of St. Agnes 1831
Alice Gray: a domestic novel 1833
 Mrs. Ward was very prolific, and I fear that the above list cannot be regarded as complete. I am apprehensive that some of her novels have eluded my research. At the same several works of fiction were attributed to this popular authoress and piratically appeared under her name which certainly were not from her pen.

Ringrove; or, Old Fashioned Notions 1827
 Mrs. Jane West was born in London on April 30th, 1758. When she was a child her family moved to Desborough, Northamptonshire. She married a yeoman farmer, Thomas West, who died on December 23rd, 1823. In 1800 she wrote to Bishop Percy, who interested himself in her work and proved an unflinching friend. He told her on one occasion that her novels were greatly in demand at the three circulating libraries in Brighton. (Gent Mag., 1852, ii, p. 100). After a lapse of more than ten years, Mrs. West's last work was her novel, Ringrove. She died at Little Bowden on March 25th, 1852. For further details see under her name in The Dictionary of National Biography.

- Adventures of Dick Distick, The.* 3 vols., Effingham Wilson. 1812. By George Daniel. A novel suggested by Tristram Shandy.
- Adventures of Dick Hazard, The.* One vol. W. Reeve. 1755. This might almost be termed an early "sporting novel."
- Adventures of Hugh Trevor, The.* By Thomas Holcroft. Vols. I-III, Shepperson and Reynolds. No. 137, Oxford-street. 1794. Vols. IV-VI. G. G. and J. Robinson, Paternoster-row; and Shepperson and Reynolds. No. 137, Oxford-street. 1797.
- Adventures of Hugh Trevor, The.* By Thomas Holcroft. The Third Edition. 4 vols., G. G. and J. Robinson. 1801. There may have been a Second Edition between 1799 and 1801, but it seems more probable that the publishers (Robinson) assumed that Vols IV-VI, 1797, might stand as a separate (and a Second) Edition, hence actually the Third Edition so-called, 1801, is the Second Edition of the complete work. The Bodleian Library catalogues a Second Edition, but this is only Vols. I-III, The Adventures of Hugh Trevor. By Thomas Holcroft. The Second Edition. 3 vols., 12mo. Shepperson and Reynolds. 1794. (Bodleian, Shelfmark 249. S. 315). This Second Edition, identical with the First Edition, was almost certainly a new issue to accompany Vols. IV.-VI, 1797. It is then only partially a "Second Edition."
- Les Aventures de Hugues Trévior, ou Le Gilblas Anglais,* par Thomas Holcroft. Traduit de l'anglais par le Cit. Cantwell. 4 vols., 12mo., each having a frontispiece. A Paris. Chez Maradan. An VII—1798.
C. G. Kayser in his Vollständiges Bücher-Lexicon, Leipzig, 1835, records a German translation of Hugh Trevor: Hugo Trevor, sein Leben und Schicksaal. 8. Leipz . . . Breitkopf.
- Adventures of Jack Smart, The.* One vol., S. Crowder and H. Woodgate. 1756.
- Adventures of John Of Gaunt, Duke Of Lancaster, The.* By James White, Esq. Author of Earl Strongbow, Conway Castle, &c. 3 vols., S. Crowder, &c. 1790.
- Adventures of King Richard Coeur-de-Lion, The. To which is added, The Death of Lord Falkland: a poem.* 3 vols., 12mo. Crowder. London. 1791. By James White.

Azemia, A Novel: Containing Imitations of the Manner, Both in Prose and Verse, of Many of the Authors of the Present Day; with Political Strictures. By J. A. M. Jenks. [William Beckford]. In Two Volumes. The Second Edition. Sampson Low. 1798.

Arnold et La Belle Musulmane. Par J. A. M. Jenks. Traduit de l'Anglais par F. Soulès. Paris. Frechet. 1808.

Immediately after the conclusion of the second portion of the Beckford sale at Sotheby's, December 11th-23rd, 1882, an article appeared in the Saturday Review, December 30th, 1882, under the title "Nothing Like Leather." The journalist remarked: "Two quite forgotten novels, Azemia and The Elegant Enthusiast, which had been presented to Mr. Beckford by "the divine authoress," as he wrote on the fly-leaf, were sold for more than five pounds. Who wants to read Azemia or The Elegant Enthusiast? Probably they were valued for their very uninteresting green morocco covers." These were Beckford's own copies of his own novels. They were most charmingly bound in green morocco with delicate tooling and pink silk linings.

ANIMATED SKELETON.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

“ I oft have fought,
“ With friendly tender of some worthier service,
“ To win him from his temper, but he shuns
“ All offers—
“ Is there cause for this?
“ For sin without temptation, calm cool villany—“ Deliberate mischief, unimpassioned lust,
“ And smiling murder——”

THE ANIMATED SKELETON
Title page, First Edition, 1798

Fourth ed., 1818. A farce, The Balance of Comfort, by Richard John Raymond, was produced at the Adelphi on February 22nd, 1836. As The Balance of Comfort; or, Bachelors and Married Men it is printed in Duncombe's Edition of Plays, vol. xxxi.

Baldwin; or A miser's heir. A serio-comic tale. 2 vols. By an old bachelor. Minerva-Press, A. K. Newman. 1820. The first novel of Richard Harris Barham, Ingoldsby. See his Memoir.

Balloon; Or Aerostatic Spy, The. A Novel, containing a Series of Adventures of an Aerial Traveller; Including a Variety of Histories and Characters in Real Life. 2 vols., with a frontispiece. William Lane. MDCCLXXXVI.

The frontispiece depicts the ascent of Vincent Lunardi, September 15th, 1784. The Balloon gives a summary of all the ascents in England to date, and is extraordinarily prophetic concerning the use of aerial machines in war, etc. The Monthly Review, December, 1785, notices this novel as: The Aerostatic Spy; Or Excursions with a Balloon. Exhibiting a View of various Countries in different Parts of the World, and a Variety of Characters in real Life. By an aerial Traveller. Published by Symonds, 1785.

- Baron De Fleming; or, The Rage of Nobility.* By Augustus Lafontaine. 3 vols. Minerva-Press, Lane, Newman, and Co. 1804.
- Baron De Fleming, The Son; or, The Rage of Systems.* A novel. From the German of Augustus La Fontaine. 3 vols. Minerva Press, Lane, Newman and Co. 1804. Translated from August Lafontaine, Leben und Thaten der Freiherrn Quinctius Heymeran von Flaming, 1795-6. Published under the pseudonym Gustaf Freier.
- Baron Of Falconberg; Or, Childe Harold in prose, The.* By Mrs. Bridget Bluemantle. [Mrs. E. Thomas]. 3 vols. Minerva Press. A. K. Newman. 1815.
- Baron of Manstow, The.* A novel. From the German. 2 vols. W. Lane at the Minerva. MDCCXC.
- Baroness Of Beaumont, The.* By A Lady. A Narrative founded on Observation. The object of it is a perfect Acquiescence in the Will of the Great Disposer of Events: whilst it shews Virtue in different Characters, it will, it is hoped, not be found destitute of Amusement and Originality. 2 vols. Robinsons. 1792.

Les Barons De Felsheim. Histoire Allemande Qui N'Est Pas Tirée De L'Allemand; Par Pigault-Lebrun, Auteur de l'Enfant du Carnaval, etc. 4 tom. A Paris. Chez Barba, libraire, palais du Tribunal, galerie derrière le théâtre Français, No. 51. 1798. Quatrième Édition. Ibid. 1806. More than one play was founded upon this eccentric but vastly popular romance. The two best known are: Le Baron de Felsheim, melodrame by A. Bernos, 1811; and Le Hussard de Felsheim, 8vo, 1827, and 8vo, 1828.

Barons Of Felsheim, The, translated from the French of Pigault-Lebrun. 3 vols. Minerva-Press, Lane, Newman And Co., 1804.

Barons of Old; or, The Robbers of the Rhine, The. 24 nos. Edwin J. Brett, Ltd. 1870.

Beatrice; Or, The inconstant; A tragic novel. 2 vols. William Lane. 1788.

Beatrice; Or, The Wycherly Family. By Mary White. 4 vols. A. K. Newman. 1824.

Beatrice; or the Unknown Relatives by Catherine Sinclair was published, 3 vols., Bentley, on September 25th, 1852, and very frequently reprinted. Since it has been said that Miss Sinclair's Beatrice originally appeared in green cloth, it may be remarked that the book was issued at least simultaneously in both green and blue, and there is in fact reason to think that the blue cloth is the earlier.

Beatrice by Sir Rider Haggard was published in 1890; 4th ed. 1892; and frequently reprinted.

Beau Monde; or Scenes in fashionable life, The. 3 vols. A. K. Newman and Co. 1809. By the same author, Albany, 1819.

Beau-Philosopher; Or, The History Of The Chevalier de Mainvilliers, The. Translated from the French Original. One vol. 12mo. Freeman. 1751.

On the back of the half-title is printed: The public may be assured that this work is not a Romance, but the genuine Memoirs of a person now residing in London, and very well known to the polite world.

Beauchamp; Or, The wheel of fortune. A novel. 4 vols. Minerva-Press. A. K. Newman. 1817. By James Holroyd Fielding.

Idole d'un cœur juste, and passion du Sage,
Amitié, que ton nom soutienne cet ouvrage;
Règne dans mes écrits, ainsi que dans mon cœur,
Tu m'appris à connoitre, à sentir, le bonheur. VOLTAIRE.
Vol. I [II-III] London: Printed For G. G. J. and J.

Robinson, Paternoster-Row. MDCCLXXXVI. Since the First Edition of Caroline of Lichtfield is very rare I have thought it well in this instance to give details of the title-page. My own copy is in contemporary binding.

Lichtfield was (not altogether surprisingly) confused with the English city, Lichfield, and the book has often been quoted as "Caroline of Litchfield." This was foreseen and on page 1 there is a footnote, Lichtfield: "Not Litchfield in England, but Lichtfield, a supposed Prussian title."

The French original, by I. P. de Bottens, Baroness de Montolieu, is Caroline. Par Madame de * * *. Publiée par le traducteur de Werther . . . 2 vols., 12mo. A Lausanne, Aux dépens de l'Auteur & se vend chez François La-Comte. MDCCLXXXVI.

Caroline de Lichtfield. Par Madame de * * * Publié par le Traducteur de Werther. Nouvelle Édition, Avec des Corrections considérables. 2 vols., 8vo. A Londres, Et se trouve à Paris, Chez Buisson, Libraire . . . MDCCLXXXVI.

Caroline de Lichtfield, par Madame de * * *; publié par le Traducteur de Werther. Seconde Édition. 2 Tomes. 12mo. Elmsley. From an advertisement in the New Review, March, 1796, Elmsley was an imposter. This is probably the Paris issue.

Caroline de Lichtfield, par Madame de * * *. Publié par le Traducteur de Werther. 3 vols., 12mo. A Paris, Chez Louis, libraire, rue Séverin, No. 29. An III de la République française [1795]. Bound in at the end of Vol. II are: "Première Romance de Caroline, Musique de M. le Comte de Colemberg"; "Même Romance, Musique de l'Auteur de Caroline"; and "Romance No. 2. Musique de l'Auteur." There is a 3 vol. French edition "avec la musique des Romances par l'auteur," 8vo., 1809, published in England "pour R. Dulau et Co., Soho Square," Vol. I, printed by R. Juigné, 17 Margaret-street, Cavendish Square, and Vol. II. printed by P. Da Ponte, 15 Poland Street.

Caroline Of Lichtfield: A Novel. Translated from the French. By Thomas Holcroft. Second ed., 3 vols., Robinson. 1787. A new ed., 3 vols., A. K. Newman and Co., Leadenhall-street, and Joseph Booker, Bond-street. 1817. Irish editions. 2 vols., Watson, Dublin, 1786. 2 vols. P. Wogan. Dublin, 1795.

American edition. Caroline of Lichtfield; a novel. Translated from the French by Thomas Holcroft. The First - American Edition. In two volumes [12mo] . . . London. Printed: New York. Re-printed and sold by J. S. Mott, No. 70, Vesey-street, 1798.

- Caroline Ormsby; Or, The Real Lucille.* One vol., Colburn, 1809. Second ed., A. K. Newman, 1820.
The same author wrote The acceptance, 1810; and The decision, 1811.
- Carpenter's Daughter Of Derham-Down; Or, Sketches On The Banks Of Windermere, The.* 2 vols. Printed at the Minerva. William Lane. MDCCXCI. The same author wrote Count Roderic's Castle, 1794.
- Carthusian Friar; Or, The Mysteries Of Montanville, The.* A Posthumous Romance. Corrected and Revised by an Author of Celebrity. 4 vols. Minerva-Press. A. K. Newman. 1814. Written by Mrs. Sarah Green. The Monthly Review more than once suggests that Mrs. Green is a pseudonym concealing the sex of this writer. In any case it seems that The Carthusian Friar (the absurdity of the title may be noted) is an original romance, and "posthumous" is probably fudge. Mrs. Sarah Green was publishing novels as late as 1823.
- Cartouche, the French Jack Sheppard.* 41 penny nos., Temple Publishing Co. c. 1860. Re-issue, 14 penny nos., by Charles Fox, 4 Shoe Lane, Fleet Street.

Charles Peace the Burglar. 100 penny nos., n.d. [1879-80]. A romance woven around the burglar and master criminal Charles Peace (1832-79). It was not for a considerable time subsequent to the shooting of Arthur Dyson that Peace was (almost accidentally) apprehended, and hanged for this murder in February, 1879. "After his death he became a legendary figure, the wildest exploits being ascribed to him," Encyclopædia Britannica, 14th ed., 1929, Vol. XVII, p. 412.

Charley Wag, the new Jack Sheppard. A new and intensely exciting real-life romance. London. 8vo. [1861]. By George Augustus Sala. In My Life (1917; p. 50) George R. Sims says that when the play "Sweeny Todd" (rather "Sweeney Todd") was produced "it was announced as "Sweeney Todd, the Barber of Fleet Street, or The String of Pearls, a Drama in three acts founded on the popular work of the same title by Fred Hazelton, Esq., Author of 'Edith the Captive,' 'Charley Wag,' etc.'" For some reason Charley Wag has acquired a curious notoriety, which is quite undeserved. This slippery repute, if not arising from, was no doubt considerably stimulated by a remark of G. R. Sims, (My Life; 1917; p. 60) who wrote: "There were some dreadful stories published in penny numbers for the reading of the young who were permitted to choose their own literature. Two of the worst that I remember were "Charley Wag" and "The Woman with the Yellow Hair." This is absurd, and G. R. Sims spoke "With his tongue in his cheek," as Ingoldsby has it. Charley Wag carries advertisements of The Woman with the Yellow Hair, The Serpent on the Hearth, and Gipsy Madge.

- Clary, ou le retour à la vertu récompensé.* By Baculard D'Arnaud. A story in his Les Épreuves du sentiment, six volumes of "nouvelles," 1772-80. In The Tears of Sensibility, 1773, John Murdoch gives four stories from Les Épreuves, of which one is Rosetta; or, the Fair Penitent rewarded, a version of Clary.
It has not, I think, been observed that Clary is the original of the opera Clari, or, The Maid of Milan, which was produced at Covent Garden on May 8th, 1823. It was played about a month earlier as Clari; or, The Milanese Peasant Girl. The music is by Bishop. The opera is famous for the song "Home sweet home." Clari is sometimes attributed to Planché, but more often (and by Genest, George Daniel, and other authorities) to John Howard Payne, whose name appears in the printed copies, John Cumberland's edition, and Dicks' Standard Plays, No. 406.

- Cælia In Search Of A Husband.* By A Modern Antique. [Medora Gordon Byron]. 2 vols. Minerva-Press. A. K. Newman. 1809. Second ed., 1809. Third ed., 1810. The spelling Cælia varies and is sometimes Celia.
- Cælibia Choosing A Husband, a modern novel.* By R. Torrens. 2 vols. Hughes. 1810.
- Cælina, ou l'Enfant du Mystère.* By F. G. Ducray-Duminil. 6 vols., Paris. 1798. Regarded as the chef-d'œuvre of Ducray-Duminil. A very famous romance reprinted at least twenty times. One of the latest editions is that in the Bibliothèque des villes et des campagnes, 3 tom. 1863. Translated by Mrs. Meeke as A Tale Of Mystery, or, Celina. 4 vols. Lane, Newman, Minerva-Press. 1803. See under this title.
- Ducray-Duminil's Cælina was dramatized by Guilbert de Pixérécourt as Cælina, ou l'Enfant du Mystère, a drama in three acts, which was produced with great success at the Ambigu comique, Paris, in 1800, and printed 8vo. 1801. Pixérécourt's Cælina was adapted by Holcroft as A Tale of Mystery; a melodrama (see under this title), produced at Covent Garden on Saturday, November 13th, 1802; printed 8vo., 1802. This proved extremely popular and long held the stage. A Tale of Mystery has been considered as the first English melodrama proper, but it is not possible to be so definite and precise, although it may freely be allowed that the piece is of its kind important.
- John Wallace has an adaptation of the play by Pixérécourt, Cælina; or, A Tale of Mystery, 8vo., 1802.
- Coincidence; or, The Soothsayer.* A Novel. By Paul Sebright. 3 vols., Minerva Press. A. K. Newman. 1820.
- Coliseum, The.* A fragment of a romance by Percy Bysshe Shelley. Written in the winter 1818-19. Imperfectly printed by Medwin in 1832, and again in The Shelley Papers, 1833; first correctly and as far as written completely printed in the two volume edition of Shelley's Essays and Letters, edited by Mrs. Shelley, 1840, and thence included in collections and editions of Shelley's Prose Works.
- Colonel Berkley and His Friends; Containing Sketches of Life South of the Potomac.* A Tale. A. K. Newman & Co. 1825.
- First English edition of this American novel.

- Columella; or, The Distressed Anchoret. A Colloquial Tale.* By the Editor of the Spiritual Quixote. [The Rev. Richard Graves.] 2 vols., J. Dodsley. 1779.
- Coming Out; and, The Field of the Forty Footsteps*, by Jane and Anna Maria Porter. 3 vols., Longman, 1828. Coming Out is by Anna Maria Porter. The Field of the Forty Footsteps, by Jane Porter.
The Field of Forty Footsteps, a melodrama by Percy Farren, was produced at the Tottenham Street Theatre, "the smallest of these places devoted to the drama," on Thursday, January 14th, 1830.

- Dick Turpin.* By Henry Downes Miles. 49 penny nos., Weekly parts, price Sixpence. London: William Mark Clark, Warwick-Lane, Paternoster-Row. 1839. The Fourth Edition, 1845. Several times re-issued.
There are, of course, many versions of Dick Turpin, often as Dick Turpin the Highwayman. The first edition should be as above, not as has been supposed Dick Turpin, 41 nos., Thos. White, 1840. Nor is the Fourth Edition, Wm. Clark, 1856. This is a later and deceptive re-issue.
Turpin was (inexplicably enough for he seems to have been a complete ruffian) something of a tradition and a popular hero long before Rookwood, 1834, although that fine romance immensely increased his vogue and fame. The theatres were not backward in heroizing him. Rookwood was at once turned into a drama for the Adelphi and many minor theatres. — G. Dibdin Pitt's Rookwood! or, The Legend of the Old Lime Tree was given at Sadler's Wells on February 24th, 1840, and revived at the Royal Victoria, October 27th, 1845. H. M. Milner's Equestrian Drama, Turpin's Ride To York; or, Bonny Black Bess, first performed at Astley's on Whit Monday, 1836, in one form or another persisted until well within the twentieth century. J. H. Green, who claimed to have been "The Original Inventor" of the Juvenile Drama published a Rookwood for the Toy Theatre with a Panorama of Turpin's Ride to York, 1834.
Dick Turpin's Ride to York, a romance, 9 nos., G. Purkess. 1848. In November, 1910, "reading of the Dick Turpin type of literature" led to the appearance of a Camden Town errand-boy before Mr. Plowden the Marylebone magistrate. This youth had decamped with money and a loaded revolver "to take the road." In his pocket was a copy of Dick Turpin's Ride to York. The magistrate placing him on probation remarked that although books of a romantic character had a bad effect on certain minds hundreds of boys read these books but were able to control their imaginations.

The longest and perhaps best known of the minor Turpin romances is Black Bess which runs to 1,136 chapters. From about 1904 to 1910 the Aldine Library published Penny romances in a Dick Turpin series by Stephen H. Agnew, the author of With Pistol and Pad, Christmas with the King, The Man in Stripes, King John's Treasure, etc. Such are: The Seven Amber Eyes; or, The Demon of the Fleet Ditch (No. 163); Minions of the Moon; or, The Trail of the Sack of Gold (No. 164); The Mysterious Mask (No. 174); The Kidnapped King; or, The New Captain of the Bow Street Runners (No. 175); The Silver Lion; or, The Terror of Epping Forest (No. 176). These stories which comprise "The Dick Turpin Library," in all 182 nos., are told with spirit and do not lack a certain quality.

"The New Black Bess Library" in which is incorporated "Dick Turpin." The late Mr. C. A. Ransom had Nos. 1-38, bound in seven volumes, original coloured wrappers bound in half calf, royal 8vo. n.d.

A famous "Dick Turpin" romance is Red Ralph; or, The Daughter of Night. A Romance of the Road in the Days of Dick Turpin. By "Rip Roarer." 52 nos., Newsagents Publishing Co., c. 1866.

The characters are miscellaneous and comprehensive, including such heroes as Tom King, Jonathan Wild, and Blueskin.

Did You Ever See Such Damned Stuff; or, So-Much-The-Better. A Story without Head or Tail, Wit or Humour. One vol., C. G. Seyffert. 1760. An anonymous satire.

Dinan. A Romance. By Arthur Johnson. G. and W. B. Whittaker. 8vo. 1821.

This famous book which was long extremely popular is anonymous, and curiously the authorship has been ascribed to two such different writers as Clara Reeve and T. P. Prest. It certainly belongs to neither, although in 1841 Prest produced for Edward Lloyd a piracy, Fatherless Fanny.
Clara Reeve died in 1807, and Fatherless Fanny in no particular resembles her work. There is also internal evidence. The story opens in the year 1798, when Fanny is about five years old. At the conclusion Fanny has been married some years, and is an affectionate mother, she and her husband having been "blessed by Providence with numerous pledges of their mutual love." Fatherless Fanny which is an extremely well-written romance of its kind was several times printed as by "The Author of 'The Old English Baron,'" as edito princeps. Other editions claim Mrs. Sarah Green as author or editor, yet another edition carries Jane Taylor's name on the title-page.

Fatherless Fanny has been reprinted again and again. One of the most esteemed editions after the first is that by G. Virtue, Payner Alley, Paternoster Row. N.D. [1818-19]. The Preface says: "This Novel is one of the newest and most modern now extant." Virtue also issued an edition in penny numbers.

Thomas John Dibdin has a burletta, produced at the Royal Circus, May 31st, 1819, Florence Macarthy; or, A Town in Hibernia.
- Flying Dutchman: A Legend of the High Seas, The.* 3 vols., London: 1839. By William Johnson Neale. Another ed. "Books For Railway Reading," "Celebrated Naval Novels." One vol., ornamental boards. Price 2s. C. H. Clarke. 23a, Paternoster Row. N.D. [c. 1855].
- Flying Dutchman; or, The Demon Ship, The.* 12 penny nos. London: Foster and Hextall. N.D. [1827-1830?] Marryat's The Phantom Ship is 3 vols., Colburn. 1839. It had appeared in The New Monthly Magazine, 1838-9. Fitzball's melodrama The Flying Dutchman; or, The Phantom Ship, "not by any means behind every Frankenstein or Der Freischütz itself in horrors and blue fire" (published Cumberland's Minor Theatre, Vol. II; Lacy, Vol. LXXI), with music by Rodwell, was produced at the Adelphi on January 1st, 1827. It had a great success and was shortly burlesqued in a pantomime The Flying Dutchwoman; or, Harlequin and the Enchanted Bay at the Royal Amphitheatre, Astley's on June 4th, 1827. The authors who wrote sensational fiction for Edward Lloyd, Purkess, Foster and Hextall, and other publishers often availed themselves of the popular melodramas of the day, and as they were not slow to seize the immediate occasion we are tempted to date The Flying Dutchman, published by Foster and Hextall as early as 1827, or at any rate within the next two or three years. The Phantom Ship; or, The Demon Pilot by John Thomas Haines is a Surrey drama, and was produced at that house on July 1st, 1839.

Wagner's opera Der Fliegende Hollander was produced in Dresden on January 2nd, 1843. In 1841 he had sold his scenario to the manager of the Opéra, and having been set by Pierre Louis Philippe Dietsch (1808-65) on November 9th, 1842, it was given at the Opéra as Le Vaisseau fantôme. On July 23rd, 1870, Der Fliegende Hollander was given in Italian at Drury Lane as L'Olandese dannato. On June 16th, 1877, the Italian version was named Il Vascello fantasma. Wagner's opera was given by the Carl Rosa at the Lyceum, October 3rd, 1876, and in German at Drury Lane, May 20th, 1882.

The Flying Dutchman; or, The Demon Seaman and the Lass that Loved a Sailor, a burlesque by W. Brough, Royalty, December 2nd, 1869, sufficiently amused kindly audiences. Other burlesques are: The Flying Dutchman by Reece, Prince of Wales, Liverpool, 1883; and Vanderdecken; or, The Flying Anglo-Dutchman's Phantom Penny Steamer, libretto by W. Edgar, music Meyer Lutz, given at the Novelty, December 6th, 1886.

Vanderdecken by G. W. Wills and Percy Fitzgerald was produced at the Lyceum with Henry Irving in the title-rôle on June 8th, 1878.

Another cheap ed., wrappers, N.D. [c. 1930]. The most recent reprint to date (1940) of Frankenstein is in Everyman's Library, No. 616.

Frankenstein; or, The Demon of Switzerland, and later as Frankenstein; or, The Man and the Monster. A romantic melo-drama, in two acts, by H. M. Milner. Produced at the Coburg Theatre, London, on Monday, July 18th, 1823. Printed, Lacy's Acting Edition of Plays, Vol. 75. Duncombe's Edition, Vol. II. Founded principally "on Mrs. Shelley's singular work entitled Frankenstein," but partly on the French play Le Magicien et le Monstre.

Presumption! or, The Fate of Frankenstein, a melodrama in three acts by Richard Brinsley Peake, music by Watson, was produced at the Lyceum Theatre on Monday, July 28th, 1823. As Frankenstein; or, The Danger of Presumption, given at the Royalty on Monday, September 22nd, 1823. Given at Covent Garden, July 9th, 1824. Printed, Frankenstein, A Romantic Drama, No. 431, Dicks' Standard Plays. Wallack played Frankenstein; T. P. Cooke, the Monster. In 1827 Sir Walter Scott saw one of these two plays, Milner or Peake, at Edinburgh, and records the performance in his Journal. The London Minor Theatres adapted Mrs. Shelley's novel for their own requirements. In November, 1838, N. T. Hicks played the Monster (probably in Peake's play) at the Victoria Theatre, London. One or other of the two dramas was revived at the Lyceum in 1839 (probably Peake), at Sadler's Wells in 1843 (probably Milner), and later they were popular at several Minor Theatres. At Edinburgh, 1856-59, Henry Irving was acting in Milner's play.

Frankenstein: an Adventure in the Macabre. By Peggy Webling. Founded on the Novel of the same name by Mary Wollstonecraft Shelly, was produced at the Little Theatre, Adelphi, Strand, in 1930.

A contemporary parody of the Frankenstein dramas was Frank-in-Steam; or, The Modern Promise to Pay, given at the Olympia, on December 12th, 1824. There have been at least two later burlesques. At the Adelphi, London, December 26th, 1849, was given Frankenstein; or, The Model Man. At the Gaiety, London, December 24th, 1887, was given Frankenstein with Nelly Farren in the title-rôle.

Frankenstein has been adapted for the cinema, and there is also a kind of sequel, Frankenstein's Wife, a screen play.

Der Geisterseher. The first part of Schiller's romance was turned into English in 1795 by D. Boileau as The Ghost-Seer; or, The Apparitionist. The translation by Dr. Wilhelm Render, "Teacher of the German Language in the University of Cambridge," The Armenian; or, the Ghost Seer. A history founded on fact, 4 vols., London, Symonds, 1800 (review, Monthly Mirror, May, 1800), includes the continuation by Emanuel Friedrich Wilhelm Ernst Follenius (1773-1809).

There are several English versions of Der Geisterseher. Render was reprinted in Colburn and Bentley's "Standard Novels," No. IX (Frankenstein, complete; and Vol. I, Ghost-Seer) and No. X (Vol. II, Ghost-Seer), 1831. Also The Ghost-Seer, Colburn and Bentley, 2 vols., 1831.

Der Geisterseher. The first part of Schiller's romance was Colburn and Bentley, 2 vols., 1831. The translation in the Bohn Schiller, 1849, is by Henry Bohn who discards the work of Follenius.

Der Geistesheher, which Schiller himself left incomplete, appeared 1785-9 in the periodical Thalia, and as a separate volume, 1789.

There is a version by Roscoe in his German Novelists; an edition, Blackwood, 1856; as well as other reprints.

Lillo's famous play The London Merchant; Or, The History of George Barnwell (universally known as George Barnwell) originally produced at Drury Lane, June 22nd, 1731, was still a great favourite in the theatre, and had been reprinted again and again. Mrs. Siddons was celebrated in the rôle of Millwood.

George Barnwell, Memoirs of. One vol. Price 3s. 6d. London: Sherwood, Neely, and Jones. 1810.

Life of George Barnwell; or, The London Apprentice of the Last Century, The. 32 nos. 8vo. London: White. 1820.

This has been rather stupidly attributed to E. L. Blanchard, who is misnamed and called Edward Lytton Blanchard. Edward Leman (or Laman) Blanchard was born 1820 and died 1889. He was a very prolific author, and wrote many successful pantomimes and other dramatic pieces. When G. W. M. Reynolds had a difference with the publisher George Vickers, and left him for a new publisher, John Dicks, Vickers commissioned E. L. Blanchard to write the Fourth Series of The Mysteries of London, then in progress.

George Barnwell, the City Apprentice; or, London Life in the Last Century. 2 vols. (generally found in one). Price 1s. 6d. George Vickers. 1849. This is possibly by E. L. Blanchard.

Robinson, Paternoster-Row. 1797. By George Moore. "This novel first appeared in the Lady's Magazine": The Monthly Mirror, December, 1797, Vol. IV, p. 346. Grasville Abbey appeared in the Dublin Masonic and Sentimental Magazine, 1795-6: contemporary MS. note in a copy of the First Edition. First Irish Edition: In Two Volumes. Dublin: Printed for P. Wogan, P. Byrne, G. Barnet, H. Colbert, and J. Rice. 1798. A new ed., London: A. K. Newman. 3 vols. 1832.

L'Abbaye de Grasville, Paris, 1798; reprinted, 1810. Translated by Ducas, who erroneously (but perhaps purposely) attributed the romance to Mrs. Radcliffe. It is mentioned with Lewis' The Monk and Mrs. Radcliffe's romances in La Nuit anglaise, a satirical romance by Bellin de La Liborlière, Paris, 1799, "Deux volumes in—12 se trouvent dans les ruines de Paluzzi . . . dans les abbayes de Grasville, de Saint-Clair, dans les châteaux d'Udolphe, de Mortymore. . . ." Here the mock demon asks M. Dabaud: "Renoncez-vous librement et absolument aux Mystères d'Udolphe, au Moine, à l'Abbaye de Grasville, aux Souterrains de Mazzini, au Tombeau, à la Forêt, au Confessional des Pénitents noirs . . . ?"

H

Hag of the Storm! or, The Doomed Knight, The. "Taken from a Legend of the 'Wild and Wonderful' highly popular in Holstein," in other words an adaptation of M. G. Lewis' The Wood Dæmon (later and better known as One o' Clock!) for Astley's when it was produced on May 27th, 1833, and had a great success. For The Wood Dæmon see Montague Summers, The Gothic Quest, pp. 274-76. On Monday, June 10th, 1833, the "Entertainment" at Astley's commenced with The Siege of Troy, "Including and embodying all the varied resources of the Theatre," a very real and not too remote echo of Elkanah Settle and Bartlemy Fair tragi-comedy The Siege of Troy. There followed a Spectacle entitled Chinese Wonders Or Five Days Fete! of Peking, and next The Reaper "a Rustic Tale of Love and Harvest Home" delineated in "the Execution of some Equestrian Feats." The whole concluded with The Hag of the Storm! or, The Doomed Knight. Mr. Gomersal played Hardyknute, Lord Holstein; Mr. S. Foster, Rolf, his Esquire; Messrs. Bland, F. Smith and T. Smith, Osway, Rupert and Karl; Mr. Conquest, Willikind; Miss Lee, Leolyn, the Dumb Boy, Miss Daly, Una; Mrs. Pope, Clotilda; Mrs. J. Ducrow, Paulina; and Mr. Curtlich, Sangrida, the Hag of the Wood. There were marvellous effects, "A Midnight Storm of August, Convocation of Dæmons, Witches, and Fiends to bow to the Evil Enchantress. Awful Charm and Incantation. Change to the Baronial Hall." Later, an "Allegorical Ballet of Sorcery" was "interrupted by the Mysterious Woman of the Black Veil—sudden Convulsion of Nature and Awful Darkness of the earth, preparatory to the Fiery Appearance of the Sorceress demanding her Victim. Sleeping Chamber of Mystery, and the Fathom Deep Cell of Sorcery. Ropy Altar of Human Bones—The Dark Powers of Evil Fall, and the Rightful Heir is Re-enstated in the honour of the Domains of Holstein, whilst the Doomed Knight is borne off by the Dragon Dæmon."

In its original form, in derivative minor melodrama and spectacle Lewis' romantic play remained long exceedingly popular, and as late as 1848 the Marylebone Theatre called their Christmas pantomime, produced December 23rd, Harlequin and Hardyknute; or, The Knight and the Wooden Demon.

Second ed., ibid. 3 vols., 1794.

Translated from Hermann von Unna, 2 vols., 1788.

There is a detailed notice of Herman of Unna in The Monthly Review, Vol. XV, pp. 121-28, 1794, when the original Hermann von Unna is mistakenly supposed to be by Professor Kramer of Kiel.

Hero; Or, The Adventures Of A Night, The. A Romance. Translated From The Arabic Into Iroquese; From The Iroquese Into Hottentot; From The Hottentot Into French; And From The French Into English. A sad tale's best for winter; I have one of ghosts and goblins.—Shakespeare. The best and wholesomest spirits of the night envelope you.—Ibid. In Three Volumes. Colburn. 1815.

Hero; Or, The Adventures Of A Night, The. A Romance. [All as English edition.] Two Volumes In One. Vols. I-II. Philadelphia: Published By M. Carey & Son, Corner Of Fourth And Chesnut Streets. 1817. Vol. I, pp. 1-119. Vol. II, pp. 1-117.

The Hero has been mistakenly ascribed to Eaton Stannard Barrett, presumably because he is the author of The Heroine, a satiric tale in the same genre, and also because The Hero is advertised by Colburn in the Third Edition, 1815, of The Heroine. Actually The Hero is a translation (originally made about 1800) by Mrs. Sophia Elizabeth Shedden from La Nuit Anglaise, 2 vols., Paris, 1799, by Belin de La Liborlière. (See under this title.) Sophia Elizabeth Shedden was the second daughter of Matthew Lewis, Under-Secretary of War, and the younger sister of Matthew Gregory ("Monk") Lewis.

The Hero is "Dedicated, With All Due Humility To The Authors Of The Mysteries Of Udolpho; The Tomb; Gravelle Abbey; The Monk; Hubert De Sevrac; Celestina; And The Heroine." See respectively under these several titles.

The Tomb is Le Tombeau.

It may be remarked that the satire of The Hero although not unamusing is rather too rough and too drawn out to be wholly effective. Mr. Dob (in the original, Monsieur Dabaud), a Parisian bourgeois, who has become a votary of the roman noir is practised upon by a series of japeries counterfeiting various incidents in the romances of Mrs. Radcliffe, Matthew Gregory Lewis, and other famous writers. In a final scene he is obliged freely and absolutely to renounce "your Grasville Abbey, Hubert de Sevrac, Celestine, Mysteries of Udolpho, The Monk, Sicilian Romance, The Tomb, Romance of the Forest, The Italian; . . . all romances, past, present, and to come, which may contain spectres, ruins, old castles, banditti, concealed doors, daggers crusted with blood, and, above all, a tower bearing the name of even one of the subdivisions of the four cardinal points." He must needs bind himself never to look into "an English romance properly so called, nor into any English novels, excepting those of Fielding, Smollet, and Miss Edgeworth; Waverley, and others of the same author; Sketches of Character, and Pride and Prejudice, with others by the same author." A terrible threat is:—"I will oblige you to read a whole chapter of the second volume of Cælebs."

- The Intrigues Of A Morning; Or, An Hour in Paris* was given at Covent Garden 18th April, 1792. This farce is an adaptation from Molière's Monsieur de Pourceaugnac, and Mrs. Parsons was accused of having made a literal copy of Charles Shadwell's The Plotting Lovers; or The Dismal Squire, first acted and printed in Dublin, 1740. Charles Shadwell, however, frankly acknowledges that his piece is taken from Monsieur de Pourceaugnac, which indeed has been drawn upon again and again by English dramatists.

THE HERO; OR, THE ADVENTURES OF A NIGHT
A romance by Mrs. Sophia Elizabeth Shedden
Title page, Vol. II, American edition, Philadelphia, 1817

Romance of "The Ordeal By Touch" [Mrs. Elizabeth Caroline Grey]. Serialized in Lloyd's Entertaining Journal and Weekly Miscellany, 1846-7, commencing October 31st, 1846; concluding March 27th, 1847. Issued in numbers, E. Lloyd. 1847.

In Mrs. Grey's romance the Iron Mask is not (as might be supposed) the theme of L'Homme au Masque de Fer, which had been utilized by Ann Yearsley in The Royal Captives, A Fragment of Secret History, 1795, but quite another story set in the period 1720-1, the scene London. The Iron Mask hides an evil and mysterious astrologer. The tale is full of adventure and hairbreadth escape, only marred by a somewhat huddled conclusion, a fault not altogether uncommon in these romances.

Jack Rann. (Sixteen-String Jack.) By James Linridge. 52 penny nos., G. Purkess, Compton Street, Soho, 1845. Jack Rann, alias Sixteen-String Jack, re-issue 1850.

The Life and Adventures of Jack Rann, Sixteen-String Jack. Issued in penny weekly nos., London: A. Ritchie, 6 Red-Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Lætitia, Lady Lade, was believed to be the mistress of John Rann, the notorious highwayman. See "A Genuine Account of the Life of John Rann, alias Sixteen-String Jack," 1774, where his chère amie Mrs. Smith (afterwards Lady Lade) is described as "rather above the middle size," p. 29 of this pamphlet. Sir John Lade, "the libertine Lad," married Mrs. Smith. She was the mistress of the Duke of York, and others. Her portrait was painted by Sir Joshua Reynolds in 1785. There is a full account of her in The Female Jockey Club by Charles Pigott, and in Robert Huish's Memoirs of George the Fourth, Vol. I, p. 141. Lady Lade died at the Hithe, Egham, Surrey, May 5th, 1825. Sir John Lade, nicknamed "Jehu," born 1759, died in his eightieth year at Egham on February 10th, 1838. See further Notes and Queries, 11th Series, Vol. X, October 17th, 1914, p. 316, also same vol., pp. 357, 394, 472.

William Leman Rede's Sixteen String Jack was first produced as a spectacular drama at the Coburg on February 18th, 1823, and revised as "A Romantic Drama" at the Olympic, on November 15th, 1841. Printed, Dicks's Standard Plays, No. 392.

Sixteen String Jack; or, The Knaves of Knaves Acre. A melodrama by Thomas Egerton Wilks. Produced at Sadlers Wells on Monday, November 28th, 1842. Printed, Duncombe, Vol. LXIII; Lacy, Vol. CV.

George R. Sims My Life (1917), pp. 51-2, speaks of Sixteen String Jack—whether W. L. Rede or T. E. Wilks or another version he does not say—being played under Richards' proprietorship to packed houses at the Garrick Theatre in Leman Street, Whitechapel, "a theatre run on the lines of a gaff." Should this theatre be the Garrick, Leman Street, Goodman's Fields; or the Effingham Saloon, Whitechapel; or Royal Pavilion, Whitechapel? I imagine "Leman Street, Whitechapel" is a slip for Leman Street, Goodman's Fields.

INTERSPERSED WITH SOME PIECES OF POETRY.

BY ANN RADCLIFFE,
AUTHOR OF THE ROMANCE OF THE FOREST, ETC.

IN FOUR VOLUMES.

Fate fits on these dark battlements, and frowns,
And, as the portals open to receive me,
Her voice, in fullen echoes through the courts,
Tells of a nameless deed.

VOL. I.

Maria Harcourt. A novel. 2 vols. Stalker. 1788.

Maria Marten; or The Murder in the Red Barn. For an account of the celebrated murder of Maria Marten by William Corder see All The Year Round, Vol. 18, No. 443, October 19th, 1867, pp. 397—403. The murder took place in 1827, and Corder was executed the following year. In 1831 was published The Red Barn, A Tale, founded on Fact by William Maginn. See under this title. More than one melodrama was based on the murder, and these were huge favourites at the London minors and in the smaller country theatres. The first recorded London performance of a Maria Marten melodrama seems to be that at the Marylebone Theatre, April 6th, 1840. The house dramatist to the Queen's Theatre, Battersea, wrote a melodrama on the Red Barn which has not been printed but from which a number of similar plays were derived. For an account of these and of the fortunes of Maria Marten on the stage see, Maria Marten ; or, The Murder in the Red Barn," a Traditional Acting version here for the First Time printed and published, by the Care of Mr. Montague Slater, Esquire." London; Gerald Howe: 1928. The last London revival of Maria Marten ; or, The Murder in the Red Barn was at the Elephant Theatre (Elephant and Castle) in 1927. At the doors was sold a penny pamphlet Maria Marten ; or, The Mystery Of The Red Barn, pink wrappers illustrated, 8 pp., with three crude cuts in the traditional manner. This was published by "E. Lane, Bookseller, Club Row, Bethnal Green Road, Every Sunday Morning From 9 to 1. And at Theberton Street (Upper St. end) Islington, Nightly 6 to 10. Outside the Pied Bull. With all the Famous Old Song Books, Irish, Scotch, and Jew Joke Books, Dog and Bird Books. All the Famous Crimes. Other famous books in course of preparation are:—Sweeny Todd, Sapho, Jane Shore, Jack Sheppard, Dick Turpin, Maria Monk, The Artists' Model, etc."

The Red Farm ; or, The Well of St. Marie, A Domestic Drama in Two Acts, by William Thomas Moncrieff, which was produced at Sadler's Wells, on Tuesday, August 29th, 1842, has as its plot a story, the scene being laid in France, almost exactly resembling the incidents of the Red Barn Murder.

Maria Monk. Awful Disclosures of . . . in the Hôtel Dieu Nunnery at Montreal. See under Awful Disclosures.

The First Edition is 1836. New York: Published by Howe & Bates; No. 68 Chatham street. 12mo., pp. xviii and 231. Groombridge, London, 18mo., Price 2s. 6d., 1836, is later in the same year.

The Second Edition, "with an Appendix and a Supplement, and a Plan of the Nunnery, 2nd edition, revised by the Rev. J. J. Slocum of New York," is 1837. London: J. S. Hodson, 112 Fleet Street. 12mo., pp. 385, and folding plan.

There have been innumerable cheap reprints of this anti-clerical romance, as it may be surely termed, for Maria Monk was, in the words of Colonel W. L. Stone of New York who investigated her "revelations," an "arrant impostor," and her book "a tissue of calumnies." Maria Monk has been aptly described by Mr. G. K. Chesterton as "a dirty half wit." This unhappy wretch in 1849 robbed a paramour, who prosecuted her, and she died in prison. See for details The True History of Maria Monk, Catholic Truth Society, London: C. 132. Also The Protestant Platform (pp. 11-12) by G. G. Elliot Anstruther; Catholic Truth Society, London: C. 180.

Memoirs Of A Woman Of Pleasure, The. [By John Cleland.] Mr. C. R. Dawes has obliged me with the following note: "There are very many different editions of this book, and it has never been definitely established which is the actual original, nor the exact date. The first edition, which ever it may be, is certainly not dated. My copy which has "Memoirs of    London: Printed for G. Fenton in the Strand," on the title-page, N.D. 2 vols., 12mo., pp. 232 and 252, is generally considered to be the Second Edition, and G. Apollinaire says that this edition appeared in 1747 or 1748, but he does not give his reasons. The current title is Memoirs of Fanny Hill. There is an edition with illustrations said to be by Rowlandson. I have never seen it, but am told that the illustrations are not very good. In most reprints up till quite recent times, the homosexual episode is omitted."

In 1750 Griffiths the bookseller, who is doubtless G. Fenton, published an expurgated edition, 12mo., as Memoirs of Fanny Hill. There have been many reprints, several of which were illustrated and all of which were clandestine, of this masterpiece of English erotica. There is at least one much mutilated chapbook version of Fanny Hill, c. 1820.

The Isidore Liseux edition, Memoirs of Fanny Hill, "A new and genuine edition from the original text, London, 1749," was published, Paris, 1888. Reprinted, 1890.

An early French translation is La Fille de Joye, Ouvrage quintessencié de l'Anglois, A Lampsaque, 1751. One vol., 8vo., pp. 172. An abridged version. Attributed (La France Littéraire, 1769), to the son of a Parisian banker, named Lambert. It is also said to be the work of Fougeret de Montbron, whose is the famous little erotic fairy-tale, Le Canapé couleur de Feu, Amsterdam, 1741.

The second French version of Memoirs of Fanny Hill was very literally turned as regards the title at all events: Apologie de la fine galanterie de Mlle. Françoise de la Montagne, 1756. Nouvelle Traduction de Woman of Pleasur [sic] ou Fille de Joie par M. Cleland, contenant les Mémoires de Mademoiselle Fanny, écrits par elle-même. A Londres, chez G. Fenton, dans le Strand. 2 tomes. Avec figures. MDCCLXXVI.

With 13 somewhat free illustrations. A French text.

La Fille de Joie, ou Mémoires de Miss Fanny. A Paris, chez Madame Gourdan. MDCCLXXXVI. One vol., 34 illustrations of a fine quality. Accounted the best French edition.

La Fille de Joie, ou Mémoires de Mademoiselle Fanny. Nouvelle édition. Avec figures. 2 tom., A Londres: 1790. 12 illustrations, 6 in each volume.

There were other French translations in 1821, 1823, 1825, and (2 vols., chez Duquessne), 1868.

Mémoires de Fanny Hill par John Cleland (XVIII^e siècle) entièrement traduits de l'anglais pour la première fois par Isidore Liseux. Imprimé à cent exemplaires pour Isidore Liseux et ses amis. One vol., Paris: 1887. In spite of entièrement this translation is not altogether complete, the episode at the inn being omitted.

Another translation: L'œuvre de John Cleland (Memoirs de Fanny Hill, femme de plaisir), Troisième Série, Les Maîtres De L'Amour, Bibliothèque Des Curieux. Paris: 1910. A valuable Introduction by Guillaume Apollinaire.

There are several Italian versions of The Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure, of which one La Meretrice Inglese, Cosmopoli (Venice), about 1764 is by Count Carlo Gozzi. A German translation Das Frauenzimmer von Vergnügen, Boston, R. Chesterfield (actually Leipzig, 1872), is Vol. I of the series Priapische Romane, but there were earlier adaptations, and of these the translation, Leipzig c. 1860, is said to be very faithful and well rendered.

Monk, The. A Romance. In Three Volumes. London. J. Bell. 1796.

The first issue of the First Edition, published in March, 1796. Price 9s.

The second issue of the First Edition, published in April, 1796. Price 10s. 6d.

The two issues are easily distinguished and differ in several important details. Thus, Vol. I, p. 25, l. 14, confidence (First Issue) becomes conscience.

Vol. II, p. 73, line 23, frequently (First Issue) becomes occasionally.

Vol. III, p. 274, catchword infinite (First Issue) is abbreviated to inf—.

In Vol. I, the poem on pp. 88-89 in the First Issue has 55 lines. Second Issue, the poem commences on p. 87 and has 49 lines only.

Vol. III, first issue, verso p. 315 carries an advertisement of two other of Bell's publications. The second issue has no advertisement.

First Issue. Vol. III. concludes with the death of Ambrosio as soon as he is hurled on to the rocks. A short horizontal line is drawn, and there is an added paragraph commencing: "Haughty Lady, why shrunk you back . . ."

Second Issue. Vol. III. Twenty-seven lines are added after Ambrosio is hurled on to the rocks, which detail his agony during the six days he lingers. The "Haughty Lady" apostrophe does not appear.

Title-pages. First Issue: "In Three Volumes" is found above the quotation. Second Issue: "In Three Volumes" is found below the quotation.

"In the first issue on the verso of page 315 of Volume III is an advertisement of two books offered by the same publisher [Bell]. In the second issue this advertisement is omitted. The issues are, however, easily distinguished by their title pages, the first having the words "In Three Volumes" above the quotation and the second having the words below the quotation." Frederick Coykendall.

The Monk. A Romance. In Three Volumes. London, J. Bell. 1796. The Second Edition, as expressed on title-page. Published in October, 1796.

This has the briefer description of Ambrosio's death, as in First Issue of First ed., but the "Haughty Lady" apostrophe follows.

The Monk. The Third Edition. (As expressed on title-page.) 1797. This Third Edition seems to be the sheets (with all errors) of the first issue, kept back by the publisher because of the mistakes, and bound up with a Third Edition title-page to meet the demand for a new edition. This suggestion is made by Mr. Coykendall. Fourth Edition.

The Monk: as Ambrosio; or, The Monk: a romance.

“With considerable additions and alterations.” 3 vols., 1798.

The alterations mainly consisted of the omission of the paragraph which gave greatest offence as seeming to reflect on the Bible, and a chastening or omission of various presumedly erotic passages. The British Museum has the author’s copy with his manuscript revisions for the new edition of 1798. Passages are toned down and words altered.

The passage on the Bible in ed. 1796, is Vol. II, chapter vii, p. 247.

Fifth Edition.

Ambrosio; or The Monk. By M. G. Lewis, Esq., M.P. Fifth Edition, in 3 vol. Price 12s. in boards. “With considerable additions and alterations,” (as in Fourth Edition), 1800.

At the end of Adelmorn the Outlaw, 8vo., 1801, Bell advertises this Fifth Edition, but adds: “N.B. The First Edition of the above Romance may be had at the Publisher’s, price One Guinea.”

Bell, 148 Oxford-street, on the production of Raymond and Agnes, a Ballet Pantomime (from The Monk), Covent Garden, Thursday, 16th March, 1797, advertised The Monk, 3 vols., 10/6, and announced that he “found it necessary to inform the public that a few copies of the Second Edition still remained. The Book has been reported out of print, and as a Grand Ballet has been brought forward, taken from the above work, many people may wish to see the book before the performance; and as it will be some months before a new edition can be ready to supply the demand, he has given this notice.”

There is a later Victorian pantomime: Raymond in Agonies, A Bit of Fun with Harlequin and the Bleeding Nun.

Early Irish Editions of The Monk.

The Monk. A Romance. 2 vols., Dublin, Brett Smith for P. Wogan, P. Byrne, W. Jones, and G. Folingsby. 1796. Text, second London issue of April, 1796.

The Monk. A Romance. 2 vols. Dublin, Porter. 1797.

The Monk. A Romance. 2 vols. Dublin. J. Charles, 49 Mary Street for the Proprietor. 1808.

The Monk. A Romance. 3 vols., Waterford. J. Saunders. 1796. Mr. Louis F. Peck (See Times Literary Supplement, Thursday, March 7th, 1935, Bibliographical Notes) has pointed out that this edition has 1818 watermarks, and there can be little doubt, as he suggests, that since Lewis died in 1818 the printer, visualizing a revival of interest in his great novel of more than 20 years before, hurriedly issued a number of "first editions."

The Monk. A Romance. One vol., 12mo. Aberdeen. 1820.

The Monk. A Romance. 3 vols. London. N.D. [c. 1820].

The Monk. A Romance. Printed for the Booksellers. One vol., 8vo. London. N.D. [c. 1827].

The Monk. Paris. 1832. This edition has both the long ending and the "Haughty Lady" paragraph.

The Monk. A Romance. One vol. 16mo. Published by J. S. Pratt. Stokesley, Yorkshire. 1848.

Also with title-page "London: Published by J. S. Pratt."

"There is an illustrated edition of The Monk in one volume undated, and without name of publisher or printer, apparently made up from twenty-four serial parts. The text is printed two columns to a page and resembles books of this type issued between 1840 and 1850." Mr. Frederick Coykendall.

The Monk: A Tale of the Inquisition. By Monk Lewis: showing the horrors of the torture chamber, and mysteries of the confessional. With No. 1 is presented No. 2 Gratis, in a highly embellished wrapper.

Every true Protestant should read this extraordinary work: upwards of one hundred and fifty thousand have already been sold.

N.B.—Be sure to ask for Monk Lewis's Edition.

Published by G. Purkess, Compton Street, Soho, and all Booksellers in Town and Country.

Advertisement in Reynolds's Miscellany. No. 136. Vol. VI, New Series. p. 64. Saturday, 15th February, 1851.

The Purkess edition of The Monk, 1850, was in 36 penny numbers. The title-page for the bound volume issued with No. 36 runs: The Monk by M. G. Lewis, Esq. [quotation]. Beautifully Illustrated. London: J. and H. Purkess, 60 Dean Street, Soho, and all booksellers."

See further letter from Mr. E. G. Bayford, in The Times Literary Supplement, April, 1935.

The Purkess edition was re-issued, 1859. The first publication, 1850, was suggested by the "Papal Agitation" of that date.

The beautiful illustrations were reproduced in a number of cheap and semi-clandestine reprints of The Monk from 1860-1890.

Rosario; or The Female Monk (i.e. The Monk), London, For the Booksellers. One vol. N.D. [c. 1865]. As having a pseudo-pornographic appeal this title was adopted in the cheaper reprints of The Monk.

The Monk. A Romance. By M. G. Lewis, Esq., M.P. In Two Volumes. Unabridged Reprint of the First Edition. London. N.D. [c. 1890]. A useful reprint.

The Monk. A Romance. By M. G. Lewis. Two volumes. London. [c. 1894].

The Monk. A Romance. By M. G. Lewis. 3 vols. Introduction, and illustrated with etchings. Gibbings and Company. London. 1906. Edited by J. R. Statham. The etchings by R. C. Armour.

The Monk. One vol., Routledge. London. 1907. Valueless and negligible.

The Monk. 3 vols. Illustrated. Gibbings & Company. 1913. Said to be a reprint of the first edition, but having many corrections which were not made until the fourth edition.

The Monk. By Matthew Gregory Lewis. Brentano. Price 12s. 6d. 1924. With illustrations.

See further Frederick Coykendall A Note On "The Monk"; The Colophon, New Series, Vol. I. No. 1., 1935.

The Monk was almost immediately shamelessly pilfered from and abridged for a large number of chapbooks.

Father Innocent, Abbot of the Capuchins; or, The Crimes of Cloisters, an abridgement of The Monk, appeared in "The Marvellous Magazine and Compendium of Prodiges, consisting of The Southern Tower; or, Conjugal Sacrifice, and Retribution: The Veiled Picture, a Tale of Mystery, [from The Mysteries of Udolpho]: Domestic Misery; Highland Heroism; Albani; Father Innocent, Abbot of the Capuchins," with illustrations, 8vo. 1802.

A separate edition of Father Innocent, 12mo., with frontispiece, was published by Tegg, 1803.

The Castle of Lindenberg; or the History of Raymond and Agnes. A Romance. Fisher [1799] is merely the Raymond and Agnes episodes from The Monk with a few connecting paragraphs. It runs to about 5,500 words. This (in variant forms) was frequently reprinted.

Almagro and Claude; or Monastic Murder; Exemplified in the Dreadful Doom of an Unfortunate Nun. 40 pp. 1803.

A condensation of The Monk. Almagro and Claude are Raymond and Agnes. The actual story of Ambrosio is drastically abridged into four pages, 36-40.

Priests and their Victims; or, Scenes in a Convent. Containing the Confessions of a Nun; the Midnight Orgies of the Priests; the History of Sister Agnes; Secret Instructions, etc., etc. 1851. R. Donaldson, 52 Holywell Street, Strand. Price 2d. Largely draws upon (and caricatures) The Monk. French Translations.

Die blutende Gestalt mit Dolch und Lampe, oder die Beschwörung im Schlosse Stern bei Prag. Anon., Vienna and Prague. N.D. It was rashly enough asserted that Lewis had derived much material for The Monk from this anonymous romance which bears no date. An advertisement in the Weiner Zeitung, March 22nd, 1799, announces Die blutende Gestalt as "shortly to be published." Actually then this romance is largely conveyed from von Oertel's translation of Lewis.

A sequel to Die blutende Gestalt shortly followed, Der Geist Lurian im Silbergewand oder das Gericht über Ambrosio. N.D.

Spanish translation.

El Fraile, o historia del padre Ambrosio y de la bella Antonia. Barcelona. 1822. A version at second-hand from the French translation of 1797, Le Jacobin Espagnol.

The Monk has been adapted, and translated into Italian, and (from the French) into Swedish, and other languages.

Aurelio and Miranda, "A Drama in Five Acts with Music" produced at Drury Lane, Saturday, December 29th, 1798, 8vo, 1798 (bis); 3rd ed., 8vo., 1799, is founded on The Monk with some very feeble alterations.

The Raymond and Agnes story has been utilized in the ballet Raymond and Agnes, Covent Garden, 16th March, 1797, (see above); as also by Henry William Grosette in Raymond and Agnes, the Travellers benighted, or the Bleeding Nun of Lindenburg, performed at the London minor theatres and in some provincial towns in 1809.

The Robber's Wife; or The Bleeding Nun of Lindenburg.

A spectacular Drama produced at the Coburg on Tuesday, August 28th, 1821. Also called One O'Clock.

Raymond and Agnes, a "grand romantic English Opera in three acts," words by Fitzball, music E. J. Loder, was produced in Manchester, 1855, and at the St. James' Theatre, London, on June 11th, 1859.

Mysteries Of Ferney Castle, The. A Novel. By Robert Huish. 4 vols., Colburn. 1809.
Also ascribed to George Lambe, but Huish claimed the authorship. Advertised by Newman, 1813, 4 vols. 22s.

Mysteries Of Hungary, The. A Romantic History of the Fifteenth Century. By Edward Moore, Esq. 3 vols. Minerva-Press: A. K. Newman. 1817.

Mysteries of London, The. By G. W. M. Reynolds. George Vickers, 3 Catherine Street, Strand, and sold by him at his Office, 28 and 29 Holywell Street, Strand. — Paris: A. and W. Galignani, Rue Vivienne. Series I and II, four volumes, 1845-7.

For details see The Mysteries of London under G. W. M. Reynolds, Index of Authors. After Reynolds had separated from Vickers, the latter continued The Mysteries of London. Series III, 2 vols., was written by Thomas Miller.

Series IV, 2 vols., was written by E. L. Blanchard.

For these see further, below. The Mysteries of London was frequently re-issued both by Vickers, and (later) by John Dicks.

Dicks issued Series I and II, Reynolds' work.

The Mysteries of London. Vickers advertised: "On Wednesday, September 20th [1848] was commenced the First Number of a Third Series of the "Mysteries of London," by Thomas Miller, Esq. Author of "Gideon Giles the Roper," "Fair Rosamond," "Lady Jane Grey," "Pictures of Country Life," "Godfrey Malveroy," "Poems," etc. This Series which is entitled "The Mysteries of London; or, Lights and Shadows of London Life" contains the most Truthful and Interesting Description of Every Class of Society in the Metropolis; and in Beauty of Composition, Fearlessness of Exposure, Variety of Incident, and Excitement of Narrative, rivals, if it does not surpass, the celebrated "Mysteries of Paris" by the far-famed Eugene Sue. In Weekly Numbers at One Penny, and Monthly Parts at Sixpence. G. Vickers, 334 Strand; and All Booksellers."

The Mysteries of London. By E. L. Blanchard, Author of "The Confessions of a Page of the Court of George IV," etc. No. 1 published on Saturday, September 22nd, 1849. To be continued in Weekly Numbers, price One Penny, and in Monthly Parts, price Sixpence. Each number splendidly illustrated by J. Gilbert, Esq., and the whole forming a volume, when complete, uniform with those of the First, Second, and Third Series. G. Vickers: 334 Strand. It may be remarked that the Miller and Blanchard Series fall far below Reynolds.

A drama founded on Reynolds' romance and entitled The Mysteries of London was produced at the Marylebone Theatre, Church-Street, Edgware-Road, on May 18th, 1846. Paul Henri Corentin Féval has a drama, Les Mystères de Londres, ou les gentilhommes de la nuit, in 5 acts, 1849, printed in the Bibliothèque dramatique, tom. 17. The subtitle recalls a later romance, The Wild Boys of London; or, The Children of Night, issued in penny numbers.

..... "Thus conscience

Can make cowards of us all." [Hamlet, III, 1.]

[Rule.] Vol. I (II-III-IV.) [Double rule.] London: Printed for William Lane, at the Minerva-Press, Leadenhall-Street. [Rule.] MDCCXCVI. Half-title: Mysterious Warning. In Four Volumes. With an Engraved Frontispiece.

The Mysterious Warning; including the Memoirs of the Solitary Man of the Desolate Mansion, by Mrs. Parsons with 10 fine Engravings, the 4 volumes in 9 Sixpenny Numbers, or in boards 5s. Being "Fisher's Edition of The Mysterious Warning." Printed and Sold by S. Fisher, 151, St. John Street, West Smithfield; and to be had at Mr. Hughes, 35 Ludgate Street.

The Mysterious Warning. By Mrs. Parsons. With a biographical Introduction by Montague Summers. Limited Edition. 2 vols., Robert Holden: 1928.

The Mysterious Warning is one of the seven "horrid novels" mentioned in Northanger Abbey, Chapter VI, but Miss Thorpe alludes to it as Mysterious Warnings.

Mysterious Wife, The. A novel. By Gabrielli. [Mrs. Mary Meeke.] 4 vols., William Lane, at the Minerva Press. MDCCXCVII.

Mystery. By Francis Lathom. 2 vols., Symonds: 1800.

There are French and German translations, but the French version must not be confused with Le Mystère, ou Il y a quarante uns, traduit par Defauconpret, 4 vols., 1821, which is a rendering of Gaspey's The Mystery; or, Forty Years Ago. [See next entry.] The Catalogue général of the Bibliothèque Nationale, Tome LXXXIX, 1926, Col. 872-3 under "Lathom" has fallen into this error.

Mystery; or, Forty Years Ago, The. A Novel [by Thomas Gaspey]. 3 vols., Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme and Brown. 1820.

Le Mystère, ou Il y a quarante ans, par l'auteur de "Calthorpe," traduit de l'anglais par le traducteur des romans historiques de Walter Scott. [A.-J.-B. Defauconpret.] Paris. Librairie grecque-latine, 4 vols., 1821.

In the Catalogue général of the Bibliothèque Nationale

Calthorpe and consequently Le Mystère are erroneously ascribed to Francis Lathom, the latter being confused with the French version of Lathom's Mystery, whereas it is a version of Gaspey's The Mystery.

Mystery And Confidence. A Tale founded on fact. By Mrs. Pinchard. 3 vols., Chapple. 1814.

Mystery Developed, The. A Novel. By Martin Macdermot. 3 vols., A. K. Newman. 1825.

Mystery of The Black Tower, The. A Romance. By John Palmer, Jun. Author of The Haunted Cavern. [Rule.] Quotation, seven lines, Shakespeare, Macbeth, III, 4: "Can such things be blanch'd with fear." [Rule.] Vol. I (-II). [Double rule.] London: Printed for the Author By William Lane, At The Minerva-Press, Leadenhall-Street, [rule]. MDCCXCVI. Half-title: Mystery Of The Black Tower. Dedication to Mrs. Vernon. List of Subscribers, pp. IX-XVI.

Mystery Upon Mystery, a tale of earlier times. By the author of The Baron de Falkenheim. 4 vols. Minerva-Press: Lane, Newman. 1808. Frontispiece. By the same author: The Black Banner, 1811.

Mystic Castle; or, The Orphan Heir, The. A romance. 2 vols., William Lane at the Minerva-Press. MDCCXCVI. The same author, Mr. Singer, wrote The Wanderer of the Alps, 1796; and Edwin, 1803.

Mystic Cottager of Chamouny, The. A Novel. 2 vols., William Lane, at the Minerva-Press. MDCCXCIV. Dublin ed., 1795. By the same author: The Observant Pedestrian, 1795.

Mystic Events; or, The Vision of the Tapestry. A Romantic Legend of the Days of Anne Boleyn. By Francis Lathom. 4 vols., A. K. Newman. 1830.

Mystic Sepulchre; or, Such Things Have Been, The. A Spanish romance. By John Palmer, Jun. 2 vols., J. F. Hughes, Wigmore-Street. 1807.

Le Tombeau mystérieux, ou les familles de Hénarès et d'Almanza. Roman espagnol . . . traduit de l'anglais par R. J. Dardent. 2 tomes. 12mo. Paris: 1810.

Mystic Tower; or Villany Punished, The. A Romance.
London. Kaygill. N.D. [c. 1800]. With a frontispiece.
Of the chapbook kind.

- Nun and her Daughter; or, Memoirs of the Courville Family, The.* A novel. 4 vols., Minerva-Press, Lane, Newman. 1805.
By Miss Helen Craik.
- Nun of Arrouca, The.* A Tale. [By John, Earl Russell.] 8vo. Murray. 1822.
Very shortly after publication the author determinedly suppressed the book buying up every copy at whatsoever price and destroying it.
- Nun of Gnadenzell, The.* By Robert Huish. 17 nos. E. Lloyd. 1846.
- Nun of Miserecordia; or, The Eve of All Saints, The.* By Sophia L. Francis. 4 vols., Minerva-Press, Lane, Newman. 1807.
- La Sœur de la miséricorde, ou la Veille de la Toussaint,* par Sophie Frances. Traduit de l'anglais par Mme. V [Viterne]. Paris. J.-G. Dentu, 4 vols., 1809.
In the Catalogue général des livres imprimés de la Bibliothèque Nationale, Tome LIV, Paris, Impr., Nat. 1913, Colonne 413, there is an erroneous entry: "Frances, Sophie. Pseud. de Lathom, Francis." Ibid. Tome LXXXIX. 1d. 1926. Col. 872-3, we have: "Lathom, Francis, pseud. de Sophie

- Frances," under which entry is listed La Sœur de la miséricorde.
- Nun of St. Agatha, The*. A romance. 3 vols., A. K. Newman. 1830.
- Nun Of Santa Maria Di Tindaro, The*. A Tale. By Louisa Sidney Stanhope. 3 vols., Minerva Press, A. K. Newman. 1818.

- Nuit anglaise, La*, par le R. S. Spectro Ruini, moine italien. "Deux volumes in—12 se trouvent dans les ruines de Paluzzi, de Tivoli, dans les cavernes de Sainte-Claire, dans les abbayes de Grasville, de Saint-Clair, dans les châteaux d'Udolphe, de Mortymore, de Montnoir, de Lindenberg; en un mot, dans tous les endroits où il y a des revenants, des moines, des ruines, des bandits, des souterraines et une tour de l'Ouest, et chez Charles Pougens, rue Thomas-du-Louvre, No. 246."
- 2 vol. in—12. Paris. 1799.
By Belin de La Liborlière.
- "Ouvrage très original, très amusant." A parody of the "roman noir" and the popular "radcliffades." Belin de la Liborlière then attempted to show how the historical novel should be written and published his Anne Grenvill, 1800. This seems, to me at least, a very feeble kind of romance.
- Translated by Mrs. Sophia Elizabeth Shedden as The Hero; Or, The Adventures Of A Night, 3 vols., 1815. See under this title.

Re-issue, 1847.
The Ordeal By Touch is in many ways rather an absurd fiction, although by no means so absurd as the majority of self-dubbed "thrillers" of to-day. Thus the incidents are well woven, and the tale swings along energetically enough, but the history jars. There are Jesuits and Mystery. At the conclusion Henry VIII formally banishes the Jesuits from England!!!

- Reason Triumphant over Fancy; Exemplified in the Singular Adventures of Don Sylvio de Rosalva. A History in which*

- every marvellous Event occurs Naturally.* 3 vols. 12mo.
J. Wilkie, S. Leacroft, and C. Heydinger. 1773.
A translation of Wieland's Der Sieg der Nature über die Schätzwermerey, oder die Abentheuer des Don Sylvio von Rosalva, 1764. Reason Triumphant over Fancy was indifferently reprinted, 1904, as The Adventures of Don Sylvio De Rosalva. Wieland's satirical romance was translated into French, 1769. A condensed version, 1771, as Don Quichotte moderne, by Madame d'Ussieux. Under the 1769 title this is included as Vol. XXXVI (the last) of Le Cabinet des Fées, with charming illustrations.

Second Edition. 1785-6.
Fourth Edition, corrected. 1792.
The earlier Bibliography of The Recess is often confusing and confused since the publishers, Cadell, made up sets of 3 volumes from different editions. Thus we find in uniform bindings, uniformly lettered and numbered, Vols. I. and II., Fourth Edition, 1792, and Vol. III., First Edition, 1785.
An Edition, 3 vols., 12mo, Cadell and Davies, 1804, is announced as "The Second Edition," but is actually the Fifth Edition.

Le Souterrain, ou Matilde, Traduit de l'Anglois sur la deuxième édition par Mme. de Méré. 3 tom., Paris: 1787. French translation of The Recess.

The plot of Rossini's famous opera, Elisabetta, regina d'Inghilterra, which with the most brilliant triumph opened the autumn season of 1815 at the San Carlo Theatre, Naples, is taken from The Recess. Schmidt, quaintly termed "Signor Smith," the author of the libretto, very closely followed a French melodrama, Elisabeth, reine d'Angleterre, which is wholly from Sophia Lee's romance. In Elisabetta Isabella Angela Colbran sang the title-rôle, the English queen; Manuel Garcia, Norfolk; Nozzani, Leicester; and Mlle. Dardanelli, Mathilde. Elisabetta, regina d'Inghilterra was given at Drury Lane, 20th April, 1818. Mons. G. M. Gustave Chouquet in his article on Rossini, Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians, edited by J. A. Fuller Maitland, 1904, Vol. IV, p. 153, speaking of Elisabetta expresses astonishment at the "curious fact that some of its incidents anticipate those of Kenilworth." H. Sutherland Edwards, Rossini and his School, p. 47, boldly writes of Elisabetta as "a work founded on Scott's Kenilworth." However Kenilworth was not published until January, 1821, more than five years after the production of Rossini's opera. We know that Scott had read Sophia Lee's romance, and it is very clear that when writing Kenilworth he remembered much of The Recess.

Romantic Tales. By M. G. Lewis. One vol., 12mo. Groombridge: 1850. 2s.

Romantic Tales became very popular and the book was more than once reprinted. Generally two or three excerpts were made, the favourite tales, and these were issued again and again, sometimes separately, sometimes with other pieces by Lewis, and even with pieces not from his pen.

His original continuation concluding Hamilton's unfinished The Four Facardins is given in Bohn's Extra Volume, Count Hamilton's Fairy Tales, 1849. The original by Hamilton (ob. 1720), Les Quatre Facardins, is to be dated 1710-15. The Four Facardins "with continuations by M. G. Lewis and the Duke de Lévis," printed for the Lutetian Society, i.e., Leonard Smithers, Royal 8vo. (April), 1899.

As a typical reprint of the Romantic Tales may be cited: Romantic Tales. By M. G. Lewis, Author of "Tales of Wonder." London: George Slater, 252 Strand; J. Menzies, Edinburgh; J. McGlasher, Dublin. N.D. [c. 1865]. This contains: Blanche and Osbright, pp. 5-75; The Anaconda, pp. 3-36 (separate pagination); My Uncle's Garret-Window, pp. 39-66. This is generally accompanied by The Bravo of Venice, pp. 3-75 (separate pagination).

Mistrust; or, Blanche and Osbright, a Feudal Romance, was included in The Romancist, and Novelist's Library, J. Clements, Vol. I, No. 3, 1839. No. 13, same vol., ibid., contained The Anaconda. No. 58, Vol. III, ibid., 1840. contained Amorassan.

Miss Blakey, The Minerva Press 1790-1820, London. Printed For The Bibliographical Society At The University Press, Oxford, 1939 (For 1935), p. 237, states that Spectre Of The Mountain Of Granada (sic) was "Printed at the Minerva-Press, for A. K. Newman and Co.", but since she quite obviously had not seen the romance and gives no authority for naming the Minerva Press, A. K. Newman and Co., as the publishers, I imagine that her hazard is merest conjecture.

Stradella; or, The Power of Song. An Italian Romance. 13 penny nos., London; Dipple: 1848. Suggested by and founded upon Flotow's opera, which (libretto altered, by Alfred Bunn, music arranged by Julius, or Jules, Benedict) had been produced with great success in this English version at Drury Lane on Tuesday, June 5th, 1846.

- Stradella*, a lyric drama by Flotow was originally given at the Palais Royal Theatre, Paris, in February, 1837. Recomposed as a grand opera, Alessandro Stradella, it was given at Hamburg, on December 30th, 1844. In English at Drury Lane, as detailed above two years later. Alessandro Stradella (c. 1645-1682) according to the romantic story fell in love with Ortensia, the mistress of a Venetian nobleman, Pignaver —some say she was the betrothed of the Senator Alvise Conturini. They eloped. The jilted lover hired assassins who followed the pair to Rome, but on hearing in S. Giovanni Laterano Stradella's oratio S. Giovanni Battista the bravoes melted and gave the couple whom they were pledged to murder a timely warning to flee.

The Dick Turpin saga was being carried on in the romances of Stephen H. Agnew issued by the Aldine Publishing Company, 1, 2 & 3, Crown Court, Chancery Lane, London, W.C. Such, for example, are The Seven Amber Eyes; or, The Demon of the Fleet Ditch; Minions of the Moon; or, The Trail of the Sack of Gold; The Mysterious Mask; The Kidnapped King; or, The New Captain of the Bow Street Runners; The Silver Lion; or, The Terror of Epping Forest.

Susan. 2 vols., Booth: 1809.

Susan Hopley. 56 penny nos., E. Lloyd. 1842. A piracy on Mrs. Crowe's famous novel.

Susan Hopley, 1841. Susan Hopley has been ascribed to Prest, but is probably from another pen. There is a Domestic Drama by George Dibdin Pitt, Susan Hopley; or, The Vicissitudes of a Servant Girl, produced at the Royal Victoria, May 31st, 1841. Printed, Dicks Standard Plays, No. 395; and Lacy, Vol. LXIX.

Susanna; or, Traits of A Modern Miss. A novel. 4 vols., William Lane at the Minerva Press. MDCCXCV. A satire on affectation of sentiment. By Mrs. Bullock.

Swedish Mysteries; or, The Hero of the Mines of Dalecarlia. A tale. Translated from a Swedish manuscript by Johanson Kidderslaw. 3 vols., Minerva-Press, for William Lane. 1801. By Mrs. Mackenzie.

Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street. The character of Sweeney Todd was first presented in The People's Periodical, a journal published by Edward Lloyd, 12 Salisbury Square, Fleet Street; No. 1, November 21st 1846. Under the title of The String of Pearls; or, The Sailor's Gift, this romance appeared in separate penny numbers which ran to ninety-two weekly instalments.

The opening chapters were written by George Macfarren (1788-1843), who was obliged to abandon the work owing to blindness, a complete rest of the eyes having been imperatively ordered before an operation for cataract.

The story was taken up and completed with great vigour by Thomas Peckett Prest.

In 1800 there had been discovered in Paris a series of gruesome crimes of the Sweeney Todd kind, when a barber and a piemaker were convicted. These horrors are described in detail in Fouché's Archives of the Police. The whole story was given in The Tell Tale, a London monthly magazine. 1804.

Macfarren and Prest undoubtedly knew the story of the Paris barber and his confederate, and Prest drew upon this narrative. He placed the barber's shop, however, at No. 186 Fleet Street, next door to St. Dunstan's Church (premises demolished May, 1913) and the pie-shop in Bell Yard.

It has been denied that there was any such barber's shop in Fleet Street, and the idea that Sweeney Todd had a real original has been scouted, a little rashly it would seem, for Prest was drawing upon a long-standing and obstinate, if possibly only an oral authority, since there persisted a very old Fleet Street tavern tradition (current long before 1800) that such an individual as Sweeney Todd existed, and his story is only a little exaggerated.

This may well be the case, as curiously crimes have an odd habit of repeating themselves in various countries even in detail. The old watchman, outside the gate of S. Bartholomew's Hospital, about 1798, used to aver that his father had been murdered for his coin "by Sweeney Todd."

At any rate we may say that the Fleet Street tradition cannot even now be regarded as wholly disposed of, since there does appear to be some substratum of truth.

The Editor of the Boy's Standard and purveyor of much sensational literature such as Spring Heeled Jack, Charles Fox, 4 Shoe Lane, Fleet Street, chanced upon a copy of The String of Pearls—it is said that one of his staff having picked up the thirty year old forgotten book for a few pence Fox, glancing at it and having scented its possibilities, bought it from him for thirty shillings. Fox then handed it to one of his writers to refurbish and renew. George Augustus Sala is often (and not without reason) supposed to have been the pen employed, although Sala more than once indignantly denied that he had ever had anything to do with Sweeney Todd. Be that as it may, about 1878 Fox brought out in forty-eight penny weekly numbers Sweeney Todd, The Demon Barber of Fleet Street: "One Penny Weekly. 24 Pages Of Sensational Romance, With Magnificent Large Coloured Picture Presented Gratis."

Sweeney Todd has been often re-issued. A cheap (and abridged) edition of the famous old romance was printed and published by E. Lane, 21 South Street, New North Road, London, about 1929.

There have been innumerable melodramatic adaptations of Sweeney Todd, many of which were never printed and only hastily made for the very Minor Theatres.

George Dibdin Pitt's drama Sweeney Todd, The Barber of Fleet Street; or, The String of Pearls was produced at the Britannia Theatre High Street, Hoxton (managed by Lane from 1841-49, and by his widow Mrs. Sara Lane for fifty years, 1849-99). Pitt revised his play which was given on February 22nd, 1847, at the same theatre as The String of Pearls; or, The Fiend of Fleet Street. It achieved a tremendous success and reverting to the original name Sweeney Todd (often with sub-title The Demon Barber of Fleet Street) it was continually acted until the Britannia as a theatre closed its doors.

Sweeney Todd, the Barber of Fleet Street; or, The String of Pearls, a drama in three acts by F. Hazleton was produced in 1862 at the Bowyer Saloon (later the Royal Stangate Theatre), Stangate-street, Lambeth.

Sweeney Todd, in one or another of the many adaptations, was frequently played in London and throughout the provinces. A revival, in a very effective and able version, under the management of Tod Slaughter at the Elephant and Castle Theatre, London, S.W., in 1927, just before the demolition of the old house proved extremely successful and was much talked of and deservedly praised at the time.

John Lawson appeared in a Music Hall sketch Mr. Todd of Fleet Street, but it proved more laughable than terrible and after a very short time was withdrawn.

Takings; or, The Life of a Collegian. By Thomas Gaspey. 3 vols., Longman. 1821.

A Tale of Mystery; a melodrama. By Thomas Holcroft. Produced at Covent Garden on Saturday, November 13th, 1802. The play had great success, and is important in the Gothic movement as being founded upon a drama by Pixérécourt, Cœlina, ou l'Enfant du Mystère which is adapted from Ducray-Duminil's novel of the same title. See under Cœlina. Pixérécourt's drama was acted in Paris, 1800, and printed 1801.

A Tale Of Mystery, Or, Celina. A Novel. In Four Volumes. Altered From The French Of Ducray-Duminil, By Mrs. Meeke, Author of Which is the Man, the Sicilian, etc., etc. "O passions des hommes!" Vol. I (-II, -III, -IV). London: Printed At The Minerva-Press For Lane And Newman, Leadenhall-Street, 1803.

Mrs. Meeke in her Advertisement says that the approbation obtained by "Mr. Holcroft's much-admired and deservedly esteemed Melo-Drame" induced her to translate the Story which was the foundation of that performance. She has deemed it necessary to make some very material alterations in the conduct of the tale. "The two last volumes, indeed, may be considered as mere imitations of the original."

Cœlina, ou l'Enfant du Mystère, 1798, by François Guillaume Ducray-Duminil. One of the most popular of Duminil's romances.

- Tales Of Terror.* Printed by Bulmer. Published by John Bell, Oxford-Street. 1801. With three coloured engravings. Second ed., Weybridge, for R. Faulder, 1808. With an additional ballad. Often attributed to, but not the work of, M. G. Lewis.
- Tales of Terror.* Although this title has been mentioned by many writers and is included in both Lowndes and Allibone, nevertheless, it seems probable that Lewis had no connexion with any book with the title Tales of Terror. This opinion was set forth in an article by George P. Johnston: "The First Book Printed by James Ballantyne: being An Apology for Tales of Terror; with notes on Tales of Wonder and Tales of Terror." Printed in Publications of The Edinburgh Bibliographical Society, Vol. I., 1896, No. 19.
- The Kelso book of 1799 often listed as Tales of Terror was not Tales of Terror but was "An Apology for Tales of Terror. A thing of shreds and patches. Hamlet. Kelso: printed at the Mail Office. 1799." According to Lockhart (Life of Scott, Vol. I., Ch. IX.) this was the first book printed by James Ballantyne and was done at the instance of Walter Scott and not at the suggestion of M. G. Lewis. Twelve copies only were printed. The book consisted of nine ballads, 3 by Scott, 3 by Lewis, 2 by Southey and one unknown. The three by Lewis are "The Water-King," "Alonzo the Brave, and Fair Imogine" and "The Erl-King's Daughter"; all of these are included in the first edition of "Tales of Wonder; written and collected by M. G. Lewis, Esq., M.P." . . . London 1801 which contains sixty ballads.
- In Scott's "Essay on Imitation of the Ancient Ballad" (Poetical Works, 1833, Vol. IV., p. 71 et seq.) written in 1830 he says the collection made by Lewis was "first intended to bear the title Tales of Terror and afterwards published under the title Tales of Wonder." Scott further says that Tales of Wonder was criticized because of its fine format and high price (2 vols., super royal 8vo, £1 1s.) so that it was spoken of as "Tales of Plunder." That Lewis was much interested in the publication of this collection is shown by his letters to Scott, and it seems beyond reason to suppose that while he was publishing this book he should also arrange to publish, anonymously, a second book, using a title previously discarded; and for him to publish anything anonymously at this time seems unlikely. He was too popular a literary figure to make it probable that he or his publisher would forego the benefit of his name as author.

Now, Tales of Terror; with an Introductory Dialogue . . . London: 1801, is an entirely different book. It has none of the items which appeared in An Apology for Tales of Terror, 1799, and none which appeared in Tales of Wonder, 1801. The book is gruesome and in its illustrations even disgusting and it seems impossible that Lewis could have had anything to do with it. Some of the ballads are too coarse and grotesque to stand comparison with any work by M. G. Lewis; and they read more like an attempt to ridicule the popularity of the gothic romances for which Lewis was so largely responsible.

“No—I have hopes you’ll find this rage decreased,
And send a dish too much to Terror’s feast;
The vicious taste, with such a rich supply
Quite surfeited, ‘will sicken and so die.’”

Page 3 of Introductory Dialogue Tales of Terror. The book consists of twenty ballads. No. I. is an Introductory Dialogue; No. IV. has a note: “respectfully inscribed to M. G. Lewis, Esq., M.P., as an humble attempt to imitate his excellent version of that celebrated ballad.” No. XI. has a note: “This tale, as will be immediately seen by all tale-readers, is written in imitation of the Cloud-King and dedicated, of course, to M. G. Lewis, Esq.” (The “Cloud-King” by M. G. Lewis is No. XIII. in Tales of Wonder.) No. XVI. has a note: “Written by a boot-catcher at “the Pig and Pepper-box,” in imitation of Mallet’s William and Margaret. (Mallet’s ballad is No. XXXVI. in Tales of Wonder.) No. XX. has a note: “The Author humbly hopes that those of his readers whom he has failed to convince by his Introductory Defense, (No. I.) will at least be contented with the opinions, held forth in this Tale by the enraged Smedley”; and a second note: “Written in imitation of “The Fisherman” (a footnote states “Vide Tales of Wonder, Vol. I., p. 79”) by Lutetia, the Younger; with Notes and Illustrations by Philopelus Pangloss.” These notes show definitely that the ballads to which they are attached were not written by Lewis; and the last note, in connexion with the character of the other ballads, strongly points to one author for the entire book. There are, in addition, other items of evidence.—There seems to be no record of any admission by Lewis of his connexion with this book. The Monthly Magazine; or, British Register lists on Jan. 1, 1801 Tales of Wonder by M. G. Lewis, M.P., and on July 1, 1801 Tales of Terror without name of author although the same list includes Adelmorn by M. G. Lewis, M.P. The list of books printed at the end of the first edition of Tales of Wonder does not include Tales of Terror, and the list at the end of the second edition, which contains only 32 ballads instead of 60 as in the first edition, names Lewis as the author of the other volumes but does not name the author of Tales of Terror even though it is to be issued uniform with the second edition of Tales of Wonder. The list of books by Lewis at the end of Poems 1812 does not contain Tales of Terror. In the list of books in the Life and Correspondence of 1839 there is no Tales of Terror, 1801, but there is a Tales of Terror, 1807. This I have been unable to find but it is doubtless meant for "Tales of Terror—Second Edition printed for R. Faulder (& others)" 1808, which is a reprint of the edition of 1801 with one piece added. However the Life and Correspondence can not be relied upon for accuracy. Tales of Terror and Wonder, 1887, combines the Tales of Terror 1801 (No. IV. being omitted) and the 32 ballads of the second edition of Tales of Wonder.

From the foregoing and in the absence of any affirmative evidence the conclusion seems justified that M. G. Lewis had nothing to do with Tales of Terror, 1801, or with any other book of that title.

The details of the foregoing are taken from a description of The Apology which was in the possession of Mr. Aitken, Falkirk, a member of the Edinburgh Bibliographical Society, and from copies of Tales of Wonder, Tales of Terror; and other books in the possession of the writer.

Theodosius De Zulvin, The Monk of Madrid: A Spanish Tale, Delineating Various Traits of the Human Mind. By George Moore, Author of Grasville Abbey. In Four Volumes. London. G. and J. Robinson. 1802.

The author in his Preface speaks of himself as having been resident in the Isle of Wight from the latter end of 1798 to the autumn of 1799 when he returned to London. He signs his Dedication, Tottenham Court Road, June 4, 1802.

There Is A Secret, Find It Out! By Mrs. Meeke. 4 vols., Minerva-Press, for Lane, Newman. 1808.

Theresa; or, The Wizard's Fate. A Romance, by a Member of the Inner Temple. 4 vols., Minerva-Press; A. K. Newman. 1815.

Therese; or, The Orphan of Geneva. An interesting Romance. Translated from the French of the celebrated M. Victor by Sarah S. Wilkinson. On this story are founded No Less than Five Melo-Dramas. 8vo. London. Dean and Munday. N.D. [1821].

Therese; or, The Orphan of Geneva. By Thomas Peckett Prest. 32 nos. E. Lloyd. 1844.

Both these works are founded on Thérèse, ou l'Orpheline de Genève, melodrame en trois actes, by Henri Joseph Brahain Ducange Victor. Of this John Howard Payne's famous version Therese, or the Orphan of Geneva was produced at Drury Lane, February 2nd, 1821.

Almost simultaneously John Kerr's Therese; or, The Orphan of Geneva was produced at The New Royal West London Theatre, Tottenham-street, one of the humblest and smallest of the Minors. At the Coburg, another version, Therese; or, The Maid of Geneva was given on February 8th, 1821. On Wednesday, February 21st, there followed at the Olympic Therese; or, The Orphan of Geneva.

Therwald Castle. 2 vols., Wilkin: 1799.

Thievery-a-la-Mode; or, The Fatal Encouragement. One vol., J. Roberts. 1728.

A satirical novel directed against The Beggar's Opera, which is condemned as an incentive to Thieves and bad characters. Thus in some ways it anticipates the outcry against Jack Sheppard, Paul Clifford, and other romances more than a century later.

Thieves' House; or, The Murder Cellar of Fleet Ditch, The. Drama by Samuel Atkyns refused a licence in August, 1844, for autumn production at the Albert Saloon, Sheperdess-walk, Hoxton. It was founded upon a sensational romance of the same (or a very similar) title.

As The Adventures of Caleb Williams, W. & R. Chambers, Edinburgh, 1839.

Caleb Williams. In "The Railway Library," 1853.

There are several cheap English reprints of Things As They Are with title Caleb Williams. In a sixpenny edition, Warne,

- c. 1882; in "Half-Forgotten Books" by Routledge, 1904. Also with an Introduction by Van Wyck Brooks, Greenburg, New York, 1926.
- Les Aventures De Caleb Williams, ou Les Choses comme elles sont.* Par Williams [sic] Godwin. 2 vols., Paris, Agasse, An IV (1796).
This, the first French Translation, is made from the Second English Edition, 1796.
- The Iron Chest*, a play by George Colman, Jun., founded on Things As They Are was produced at Drury Lane on Saturday, March 12th, 1796, and published, 8vo., the same year. The first and second editions, both 1796, have preliminary matter attacking John Kemble for his acting and his general attitude towards the dramatist and the play. This Introduction was suppressed by Colman in subsequent reprints, e.g., in 1798, 3rd ed., and 1808, 4th ed. The Iron Chest was frequently performed, and appears in most of the Collections of British Drama. It was also several times separately reprinted.

The Vampyre is reprinted in The Grimoire—and other Supernatural Stories. Collected by Montague Summers. Fortune Press. 1936. The Introduction, pp. xiii-xviii, gives an account of Polidori's tale and its attribution to Byron.

The Vampyre first appeared in The New Monthly Magazine, April, 1819, and in spite of Byron's protests it was referred to as the poet's work. In the May number of the Magazine Colburn even advertised as a separate 8vo., at 4s. 6d. "The Vampyre, a Tale. By Lord Byron." French and German translators and publishers insisted upon regarding The Vampyre as from Byron's pen.

VESUVIA;

OR,

ANGLESEA MANOR.

A NOVEL.

IN THREE VOLUMES.

BY THE AUTHOR OF VALAMBROSA, AND FORRESTI.

Quoth Socrates, it is no part
Of prudence to cry down an art,
And what it may perform deny,
Because you understand not why.
Do not the histories of all ages
Relate miraculous presages
Of strange turns in the world's affairs
Foreseen by astrologers?

ANN OF SWANSEA. MRS. JULIA ANN CURTIS, née KEMBLE, and formerly MRS. ANN HATTON. (See p. 2.)
Born 1764; died 1838.

In 1783 advertisements appeared in several London papers requesting donations on behalf of Mrs. Curtis, "the youngest sister of Mrs. Siddons," to enable her to purchase necessities since she was in utmost want, and to allow her to earn her bread by needlework or by the making of artificial flowers, a craft in which she was accomplished. These advertisements went on to set forth how, although she was crippled with rheumatic affections which prevented her from undertaking any strenuous work for her support, her pitiful applications for some modicum of relief that had been more than once humbly addressed to her sister, the famous actress, and to her brother John Philip Kemble, had been coldly ignored.

Mrs. Siddons, it may be remembered, had appeared on October 10th, 1782, as Isabella in the later eighteenth century adaptation of Southerne's great tragedy The Fatal Marriage; or, The Innocent Adultery, achieving a veritable triumph. Her subsequent performances that season, as Euphrasia (The Grecian Daughter), Jane Shore, Belvidera, Zara (The Mourning Bride), and Calista (The Fair Penitent), had firmly established her reputation and were the talk of the town.

These extraordinary advertisements caused a resounding scandal.

In 1784 there was published a little volume of verse, Poems on Miscellaneous Subjects, by Ann Curtis, Sister of Mrs. Siddons.

On 5th October, 1784, when Mrs. Siddons made her first appearance that season at Drury Lane, her entry was greeted with a storm of hisses, and although, upon silence being obtained, her speech declaring that the stories which had been circulated against her were calumnies was received with some applause, for several evenings afterwards there were little disturbances and booing. Letters were published in refutation of the charges and the thing soon died out, but the great actress declared that she did not regain perfect confidence for three or four months afterwards.

Later an advertisement appeared to the effect that Mrs. Siddons's youngest sister, Mrs. Curtis would read a lecture at the Temple of Health in Pall Mall, the establishment of a notorious quack doctor named Graham.

Some years later Mrs. Curtis was injured in the face and almost deprived of the sight of one eye by the accidental discharge of a pistol. This episode, to which considerable publicity was given, took place in a fashionable but exceedingly ill-famed bagnio in Covent Garden.

Thereupon Mrs. Siddons made her sister an allowance of twenty pounds a year on condition that she should permanently reside not less than one hundred and fifty miles from London.

Mrs. Curtis retired to Swansea. In 1819 a visitor to that town rather roughly described her as a large woman, who squints and writes novels.

BRADDON, MARY ELIZABETH, MRS. JOHN MAXWELL

The Story of Barbara; Her Splendid Misery, and Her Gilded Cage

1880

As noted on p. 20, Miss Braddon in her "Explanation" which prefaces Vol. I says that this novel was commenced in The World under the title "Splendid Misery." A short story of the same name which "lay buried for years" in a halfpenny weekly journal caused the proprietor to claim copyright, and some litigation ensued. Miss Braddon eventually adopted as her title The Story of Barbara.

The story in question, Splendid Misery, is by C. H. Hazlewood, and was published as No. 83 of Dicks' English Novels. See under Hazlewood.

BRETT, EDWIN J. 173, Fleet Street.

In 1886, E. J. Brett advertises his "List of Publications."

Boys' Comic Journal. 1d. Weekly; 6d. Monthly; 1s. 4d. Quarterly; Cloth Volumes, 4s. No. 1 appeared on March 14th, 1883, and over thirty volumes were issued. Among the serials were Dark Deeds of Old London, by Robert Justin Lambe, and Sons of Foes by H. Whyte.

Boys of England. The oldest and best conducted book for Boys. Weekly, 1d.; Monthly Parts, 6d.; Half-yearly Volumes, 2s. 6d. and 4s. No. 1 appeared on November 24th, 1866. It ran until June 23rd, 1899, when it was incorporated with Up-to-Date Boys, No. 1, June 30th, 1899. Jack Harkaway's Schooldays, the first of the "Harkaway" series, commenced in No. 249 of Boys of England, July 23rd, 1871. The two concluding "Harkaway" stories, Jack Harkaway in the Transvaal and Jack Harkaway's War Scouts ran through Up-to-Date Boys, which came to an end after two years, its place being taken by Boys of the Empire. Charles Stevens conducted the first nine numbers of Boys of England, and it was he who wrote the leading serial, Alone in the Pirate's Lair. E. J. Brett very soon took over the editorship of the paper himself, and continued until his death, December 15th, 1895.

Young Men of Great Britain. An Interesting Journal of Love, War, Romance, and Adventure, for Men of all Ages. Price 1d. Weekly; 6d. Monthly; Half-yearly Volumes, 2s. 6d. and 4s. This Journal commenced towards the end of January, 1868, as a "companion journal" to Boys of England. Brett appointed as editor Vane St. John, who wrote the leading serial, The Night Guard; or, The Secret of the Five Masks. On reaching No. 1, 118, Young Men of Great Britain was incorporated with No. 73 of The Boys of the Empire, June 24th, 1889. Thus combined the Journal continued for several volumes.

Something To Read. The New Double Weekly Journal, containing Stories of Thrilling Interest, together with a full-sized Complete Novelette with each Number. Price 1d. Weekly; Monthly Parts, 6d.; Quarterly, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Volumes, 4s. 6d.

EARLE (OR EARL), WILLIAM (1780 ?-)

- Obi; or, The History of Three-Fingered Jack* [n.d.]
 No date, but probably 1800-01, since the popular drama by John Fawcett, with music by Arnold, Obi; or, Three-fingered Jack was produced at the Haymarket on Wednesday, July 2nd, 1800. 8vo., 1800. Also printed in Duncombe's Edition, Vol. lix. Obi; or, Three-fingered Jack was adapted for the Juvenile Theatre, scenes and characters by W. G. Webb, Old Street, St. Luke's.
The Welshman, a romance 1801
Welsh Legends 1801
Trifles in Verse 1803
Outwitted at Last, acted 1817
 Also as Outwitted at Last; or, The Ward and Brother, a comic opera, music by Lanzi, produced at Drury Lane on December 13th, 1817. According to the Dictionary of Living Authors, 1816, William Earle was in February, 1814, was fined and imprisoned for a "scurrilous and malignant libel."

W. Fraser Rae, Sheridan, A Biography, 2 vols., 1896, ascribes to Earle Sheridan and His Times. By an Octogenarian, who stood by his knee in youth and sat at his table in manhood. In Two Volumes. London. J. F. Hope. MDCCCLIX. Fraser Rae has no authority for his statement, which at the best is extremely dubious. E. M. Butler, however, in Sheridan: A Ghost Story, 1931, proceeds to elaborate this, and says that "Earle was introduced into Sheridan's household in 1790, when he was ten years of age: he remained there, probably in some menial capacity, until his master's death." This again is all random guess-work, and we hardly suppose that had Earle been in Sheridan's house "in some menial capacity" he would have "sat at his table." Such conjectures as these of Fraser Rae and E. M. Butler are worse than useless. In any case the matter is of no importance since the late R. Crompton Rhodes in his Harlequin Sheridan, 1933, dismisses Sheridan and His Times as "utterly valueless," and sums up the matter by saying (pp. 296-7) of "an Octogenarian" that, whoever he may have been, "his two volumes are rubbish."

HARKAWAY, JACK

See below HEMYNG, BRACEBRIDGE.

HAZELTON (or HAZLETON), FREDERICK

George R. Sims, My Life, 1917, p. 50, says that when the play Sweeney Todd was produced it was announced as "founded on the popular work of the same title by Fred Hazelton, Esq., Author of 'Edith the Captive,' 'Charley Wag,' etc." It is just possible that Hazelton and not Sala may have been the writer whom Charles Fox, the publisher, of 4 Shoe Lane, Fleet Street, commissioned to revise the old novel by T. P. Prest, The String of Pearls. Edith the Captive, however, is by Malcolm J. Errym, and the statement which George R. Sims makes cannot but be considered vague and unreliable. Hazelton's drama in three acts, Sweeney Todd, the Barber of Fleet Street; or, The String of Pearls was produced in 1862 at the Bower Saloon (later the Royal Stangate Theatre), Stangate-street, Lambeth. G. R. Sims has not improbably confused the Sweeney Todd play (in one version, at any rate) with the Sweeney Todd romance. Charley Wag is almost certainly from the pen of George Augustus Sala, to whom then we must also attribute Fanny White And Her Friend Jack Rawlings, A Romance Of A Young Lady Thief And A Boy Burglar Including Their Artful Dodges, Their Struggles And Adventures, Prisons, And Prison Breakings, Their Ups And Downs And Their Tricks Upon Travellers, etc., etc. By the Author of Charley Wag. With Twenty-One Illustrations. George Vickers, Angel Court, Strand [c. 1865]

HAZLEWOOD, COLIN HENRY (1823-1875)

Actor, dramatist, and novelist. He was an extremely prolific writer, producing more than seventy plays alone. For many years he occupied the position of house-dramatist to the Britannia Theatre or Saloon, High-street, Hoxton, a house managed by Lane from 1841 to 1849, and for fifty years (1849-99) directed by Lane's widow, the famous Mrs. Sarah Lane. Hazlewood was also house-dramatist to the Royal City of London Theatre, which was near Bishopsgate Station, Norton Folgate. This house was opened on Monday, March 27th, 1837, by Cockerton, and became the home of domestic (and more lurid) melodrama. Before many years the City of London Theatre was notorious as a low place of entertainment, and it was closed down in 1868. Many of Hazlewood's plays were extremely popular, and a number of these are printed in T. H. Lacy's Acting Edition. In 1863 Hazlewood dramatized Aurora Floyd for the Britannic Theatre, and this proved so great a success that a month or two later in the same year he dramatized Lady Audley's Secret for the Royal Victoria Theatre, Waterloo Road, the "Old Vic." These bold stage piracies of her work cannot but have given Miss Braddon some annoyance, and she was even more vexed sixteen years later whilst she was serializing her novel Splendid Misery in The World to receive an injunction from John Dicks, who claimed copyright in the title since they had published Hazlewood's novel Splendid Misery. Hazlewood himself had now been dead four years. Miss Braddon under protest altered the name of her novel to The Story of Barbara; Her Splendid Misery, and Her Gilded Cage, 3 vols., 1880.

Splendid Misery. By C. H. Hazlewood.
No. 83, Dicks' English Novels.

HEMYNG, BRACEBRIDGE

Jack Harkaway. Son of the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Calcutta, and sometime a Barrister of the Middle Temple. He was an extremely prolific author and wrote several serials for the London Journal. Among his longer novels are The Curate of Inveresk, a clerical biography, 1860; Gaspard Trenchard, 3 vols., 1864; Curious Crimes; On the Road, commercial travellers' tales. Also, Called to the Bar; The Favourite Scratched; The Orange Girl; Season at Brighton; Secrets of the Turf; and the "Skittles" and "Kate Hamilton" group.

He wrote a number of yellow-backs, mostly published in the eighteen-sixties at two shillings: The Stock Broker's Wife; A Stock Exchange Romance; The Girl of the Period; The Man of the Period.

On July 23rd, 1871, there commenced in No. 249 of Boys Of England the "Harkaway" series with Jack Harkaway's Schooldays. Hemyng and his "Jack Harkaway" certainly laid the foundations of the fortune of the proprietor, E. J. Brett, who died at his house, St. Peter's, Broadstairs, on December 15th, 1895, a very wealthy man.

Frank Leslie persuaded Hemyng to go to America, and write a number of American Harkaway stories. These, as well as reprints of the original English stories appeared in Leslie's Boys' and Girls' Weekly. During 1897-8 Hemyng was writing "Jack Harkaway Junior" serials. On his return to England he wrote the "Scapegrace" series for E. J. Brett. He died at his flat in Fulham, London.

- IRELAND, WILLIAM HENRY (1777-1835). (See p. 75.)
Passages selected by distinguished personages on the great literary trial of Vortigern and Rowena. A Comitragedy. "Whether it be or be not from the . . . pen of S."
 4 vols. J. Ridgway 1796-1807
 Satires, purporting to be quotations from Ireland's pseudo-Shakespearean plays and aimed at leading persons of the day. These "Passages" were written with a good deal of wit by the Rev. Sir Henry Bate Dudley (1745-1824) and his wife Lady Dudley. In 1780 the Rev. Sir Henry married Mary, daughter of James White of Berrow, Somerset. He had founded the Morning Herald in which paper the "Passages" originally appeared. When collected in book form they had a great success and ran into at least seven editions.

PORTER, JANE (1776-1850). (See p. 122.)

Jane Porter also wrote various miscellanea. At the end of the Fourth Edition, 1811, of The Castles Of Athlin And Dunbayne (see above under NERI) are advertised: "The Scottish Chiefs, a Romance by Miss Jane Porter, Author of "Thaddeus of Warsaw," and "Remarks on Sir Philip Sidney's Aphorisms," in 5 vols. 12mo., price 1*l.* 15*s.* in boards," and also "Thaddeus of Warsaw, a Novel, by Miss Jane Porter, the ninth edition, in 4 vols., price 18*s.* in boards. 'Thaddeus is a work of genius . . .' Imp. Rev."

For Thaddeus of Warsaw, The Pastor's Fireside, and Anna Maria Porter's The Hungarian Brothers, see further below under Ann Radcliffe, "Five Fine Old Novels."

Sir Edward Seaward's narrative of his Shipwreck proved extremely popular and caused something of a sensation. It was generally accepted as fact but many people declared it to be fictitious. When questioned Jane Porter said that she had edited the book from Sir Edward Seaward's own MS. Diary, and if pressed further she replied briefly: "Sir Walter Scott had his great secret: I must be allowed to keep my little one." Family letters and a MS. Diary exist which show that Sir Edward Seaward's narrative actually was written by Miss Porter's brother Sir Robert Ker Porter (1777-1842) and revised by her, and seen through the press.

Alone In The Pirates' Lair. Serial "By the Editor" in Boys Of England, Conducted By Charles Stevens, commencing No. 1, November 27th, 1866, published (and after nine numbers edited) by E. J. Brett. This romance was dramatized for the Juvenile Theatre, the sheets of the play being given gratis in four instalments to readers of Boys Of England. Later, coloured sheets were sold separately in sixpenny sets of sixteen sheets of characters and scenes. In the first number of Boys Of England there appeared an announcement: "Given away—To the Boys of England a complete new play entitled, 'Alone In The Pirates' Lair' consisting of eight scenes, seven sets of characters, six wings, foot pieces and a large stage front. N.B.—The above entertaining gift is specially designed for young readers." Brett proceeded to issue further plays: Jack Cade, with eight sheets of characters and seven scenes (there are two romances of this name, see p. 372); King Arthur; or, The Knights of the Round Table, 1870; Harlequin Jack and his Seven Brothers, 1872; The Giant of the Blue Mountains; Tom Daring; or, Far From Home; The Skeleton Horseman (for the romance of this title see p. 507); Robinson Crusoe; The Forty Thieves; Bluebeard; Mazeppa (the famous Equestrian Spectacle, for the romance of this name see p. 406); The Roadside Inn Fitzball's melodrama Jonathan Bradford; or, The Murder at the Roadside Inn, produced at the Surrey Theatre on June 12th, 1833; for the romance Jonathan Bradford, see p. 377). The favourite Jack Harkaway afforded E. J. Brett ample scope for more than one juvenile theatre play, and he also issued a Miller and his Men, 1874 (see pp. 414-15), which is very inferior to the spirited versions of West, Hodgson, Webb, Skelt, and Benjamin Pollock. Brett further announced that he had arranged to supply wooden toy stages, which from the description must have been most elaborate models with wing grooves, traps, and all details complete. It does not appear, however, that this project materialized. (See p. 229.)

Ancient Records; or, The Abbey Of Saint Oswythe. A Romance. In Four Volumes. By T. J. Horsley Curties. 1801. (See p. 232.)

A drama founded on this romance and entitled The Towers of Urbandine was produced at the Theatre Royal, Finkle-street, Hull, on December 13th, 1805, and became very popular on the York Circuit. York, it may be remembered, was one of the chief circuits and enjoyed a Royal Patent dating from 1759. The order of the circuit was generally York, Hull, Wakefield, Leeds, Pontefract, and Doncaster.

There is a very full description of the Castle of Urbandine in Ancient Records, Vol. I, pp. 160-65 (ed. 1801). The following passage is extremely Gothic. "The castle was of great extent, and built of such durable materials and rugged texture, as to bid defiance almost to time itself; but though its interior was magnificent and sumptuous, there was an air of proud grandeur in the style of the building, that was evidently meant for purposes of greater import than an old English Noble's residence. Its high-raised towers, and heavy overhanging battlements conveyed an idea of a place designed for at once a fortress and a prison.

The late Baron of Urbandine had indeed endeavoured to alter the style of the building, and to take from it that Gothic, gloomy aspect which, at first sight, excited emotions of fear and alarm in the beholder; but either the architect was unskilful, or the design was ill-judged, for no improvement could add an outward cheerfulness to the solemnity of its dark rugged towers."

Artless Tales, in 3 vols., 12mo., by Mrs. Hurry, price 15s. in boards. Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, Paternoster Row, 1811.

Arnold Zülig, a Swiss Story. By the author of Constance, the Pharos, and Argus. 3s. sewed. T. Hookham, New Bond Street. MDCCXC. (See p. 236.)

A Boy Burglar. A disguised Jack Sheppard romance. (c. 1869.) The adventures and example of Jack Sheppard were considered to exercise so immoral an influence that he was compelled to masquerade, and in this romance for example appears as Bob Chance. Jack Sheppard was prohibited on the stage, and in The Stone Jug (1873), "Adapted by J. B. Buckstone from the celebrated Novel of 'Jack Sheppard' by Harrison Ainsworth" we have Robert Chance: The Idle Apprentice (Jack Sheppard); Richard Riverside (Thames Darrell); Sampson Savage, a Thief-Taker (Jonathan Wild); Jim, alias "Purpleface" (Blueskin); and a curious cast of misnomered characters, whilst such figures as Edgworth Bess and Poll Maggot have entirely disappeared.

Celia In Search Of A Husband. By A Modern Antique.

“There wanted yet the master-work, the end
Of all yet done; a creature, who not prone
And brute as other creatures, but endued
With sanctity of reason, — — — — — and from thence Magnanimous, to correspond with Heaven,
But grateful to acknowledge whence his good Descends.”

Charley Wag, The New Jack Sheppard, A New and Intensely Exciting Real Life Romance. Illustrated by Robert Prowse.

London: United Kingdom Press, 28 Brydges Street, Strand. [1860-1861.] Published in Penny Numbers with green covers. Also issued in Monthly Parts. The Advertisement says: "In this work . . . will be found the most graphic and reliable pictures of hitherto unknown phases of the Dark Side of London Life . . . rendered in stern, truthful language by one who has studied, in all its blackest enormity, the doings of secret crime."

The origin of the name "Charley Wag" in this connexion is not exactly known, but it was in common use much earlier than 1860. A character, Charley Wag, appears in J. R. Planché's "Comic Fantastic Spectacle" The Seven Champions of Christendom produced at the Royal Lyceum Theatre on April 9th, 1849. St. George, played by Miss Kathleen Fitzwilliam, is attended by Charley Wag, Esq., an important part taken by Charles Mathews, who in Act II sang a number which rounds off

Pattery, chatter, what can it matter.

Charley Wag sort of a song.

J. Redington, 208 Hoxton Old Town, published about 1841 a character portrait of "Mr. C. Pitt, As Charly Wag." C. Pitt (who must be distinguished from George Dibdin Pitt, actor and prolific dramatist) was a great favourite at the Minor Theatres, and especially shone in melodrama of the more lurid kind. In the rôle of Charley Wag he is made up as a stalwart bewhiskered bandit in the prime of life. He wears a blue coat, red waistcoat, knotted belcher, buff breeches and wellington boots. With one hand he is aiming a pistol, in the other is clasped a great knife. A second pistol is stuck in his belt. There is a moonlit background. It will at once be observed that this is an entirely different Charley Wag from the boy thief, "the new Jack Sheppard." It should be remarked that Fred Hazelton is sometimes said to have been the author of Charley Wag and hence also of Fanny White. See under HAZELTON, Index of Authors (Addenda).

A. K. Newman published a "Seventh Edition," 2 vols., 1811, but actually this extremely popular novel ran through seven editions in the very year it first appeared, and the genuine Seventh Edition is G. Kearsley, 1787.

The Seventh Edition corrected, with Additions, and ornamented with Frontispieces, neatly engraved. Louisa; or, The Cottage On The Moor. In Two Volumes.

— "Ye good distrest!

"Ye noble few! who here unbending stand

"Beneath life's pressure; yet bear up awhile;

"And what your bounded view, which only saw

"A little part, deem'd evil, is no more!

"The storms of wintry time will quickly pass,

"And one unbanded spring encircle all."

By Mrs. Helme. Vol. I [-II].

London: Printed for G. Kearsley, at Johnson's Head, No. 46, Fleet-Street. 1787. [Price Six Shillings sewed.] Entered at Stationers-Hall.

Each volume is embellished with an elegant Frontispiece, and also another engraving, four illustrations in all.

This Seventh Edition appeared towards the end of September, 1787.

In the First Edition Louisa was written as one continuous narrative, but the Seventh Edition has a note: "This edition is divided into chapters, mottos added to each, and the whole carefully revised."

There are twenty-four chapters. The poetical extracts at the head of the several chapters are from Young's Night Thoughts, Thomson's Seasons, Shenstone, Addison's Cato, Home's Douglas, and Blair.

CIRCULATING LIBRARIES

The first Circulating Library was established in London about the year 1740, by a bookseller of the name of BATHO, at the house now 132, in the Strand.

They have since spread so extensively that every intelligent village throughout the nation now possesses its Circulating Library.

The principal of them in London are the following :

HOOKHAM'S, in Old Bond-street.

HOOKHAM'S (Jun.), in New Bond-street.

EARL and HEMET'S, in Albemarle-street.

LANE'S, in Leadenhall-street.

PARSON'S, on Ludgate-hill.

OGILVY'S, in Holborn.

DUTTON'S, in Birchin-lane.

CAWTHORNE'S, in the Strand.

Besides these there are two subscription libraries for the purchase of new books, under the direction of a committee of the subscribers, viz. :

THE WESTMINSTER LIBRARY, in Panton-square.

THE LONDON LIBRARY, in Hatton-Garden.

THE FRENCH BOOKSELLERS ARE :

DE BOSSE, Gerrard-street.

DULAU, Soho-square.

L'HOMME, New Bond-street.

BOOSEY, Old Broad-street.

GAMEAU AND Co., Albermarle-street.

THE GERMAN BOOKSELLERS ARE :

GRIFFITHS, Paternoster-row.

GIESWEILLER, Parliament-street.

ESCHER, Gerrard-street.

Among the dealers in valuable and scarce books, chiefly second-hand, whose collections are extensive, may be named Payne, White, Egerton, Faulder, Evans, Carpenter, Reynolds, Lunn, Otridge, Gardner, Leigh, Cuthell, Jeffries, Priestly, Baynes, and Lackington.

The shop of LACKINGTON, in Finsbury-square, may be deemed one of the curiosities of the metropolis, and deserves to be visited by every stranger, on account of the vast extent of the premises, and of the immense stock of books, which in consequence are brought into one point of view.

The Picture Of London, For 1802, Being A Correct Guide To All the Curiosities, Amusements, Exhibitions, Public Establishments, and remarkable Objects, in and near London. (pp. 249-50.) London: R. Phillips, No. 71, St. Paul's Church-Yard. ([1802.]

At the west end of the town are bookseller's shops (particularly DEBRETT'S, STOCKDALE'S, WRIGHT'S and HATCHARD'S in Piccadilly; HOOKHAM'S in Old and New Bond-street; EARLE and HEMMETT'S, Albermale-street; and LLOYD'S, Harley-street), furnished with all the daily newspapers, which are much frequented about the middle of the day, by fashionable people, and are used as lounging places for political and literary conversation.

The Picture Of London, For 1802 (p. 28).
